NEW LONDON, Conn., June 30.—All the spectacular elements of a highly modern sporting event were embodied at the Yale-Harvard regatta to-day as a setting for the worst beating a Yale crew ever suffered at the hands of Harvard. The Blue, once a power among college navies, was destroyed hopelessly, piteously. As she trailed the shell of the brawny Harvard giants in a slow-dragging procession, a threadsoll of the air, Harry Atwood, hovered over the race in his biplane, gliding first over one crew and then over the other, and downcast Yale sympathizers and jubilant Harvard hosts forgot the great race and gazed aloft at the bird man. Swift motor boats and hydroplanes, the fastest craft of the water, shot up and down among the maze of boats which lined the course. Thousands of cheering people crowded the river banks. It was the most dazzling spectacle ever seen at a college regatta, and it was the poorest race ever rowed by college crews.

When the race had gone half a mile there was much open water between the Yale and Harvard shells. It was all over then. From that time Yale chopped along, Harvard pulling ahead at every stroke until at the end the Crimson eight was at least fifteen lengths in front. At this early stage in the great annual struggle, when its sporting feature gave such great promise, a great cheer went up from the crowds on the observation trains on both sides of the Thames.

Up the river came the aeroplane. First only a speck, then it drew nearer. It circled about the rival crews like a great albatross. There was little thought of the men who were pulling their hearts out on the river. Atwood had stolen all the thunder. He rode the southeast breeze gracefully and had to fly far up the river to back again so as not to run down the crews and the slow-crawling excursion trains. He was with them every stroke as the rowers bent their backs to the four-mile grind.

Yale Seemed Miles Behind.

At the finish of the race Harvard shot under the bridge driving her shell ahead at 38 strokes to the minute. Little Cox, the Yale coxswain, was calling on his men to make a last stand. The Blue seemed miles behind. The whistles sounded forth in an ear-splitting clamor. Two hundred guns boomed as Harvard crossed the line.

Favorite had won the fourth victory for the Crimson in as many years. Yale had been confident of this crew and Tim Wray from the time it first began to row on the Charles River last March. Harvard knew it was going to be a race from the start. Yale came here to own the town. Even the Bunker Hill monument was transplanted to New London. The place was swathed in blue. Only here and there was there a touch of crimson. Harvard's commencement was here to witness the killing. Yale's commencement was a week or more away. There was no confidence in the crew at New Haven, so the collegiate body came here to see the great spectacle.

When the fateful old guard of Yale looked on the race and it was all over there was some one who knew what was wrong with the Yale navy. Some one above the finish line the water was jammed with the greatest fleet of yachts that ever anchored in the river, or any other American river. The rail was literally with streamers and flags, the colors fluttering in the breeze from the two high masts of the steam yacht Corsair, a huge white steel boat which stood out in the river like the Indian Harbor Yacht Club was in full holiday attire.

VANDERBILT USES HIS FISTS.

Struggles with Photographer, Who Tried to Take His Picture.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 30.—The crowd which filled the railroad station here to-day just before the start of the 'Varsity race was afforded considerable excitement when Harold Vanderbilt of New York and a newspaper photographer got into a quarrel.

Mr. Vanderbilt and Miss Eleanora Sears, a Boston society girl, were standing in the train shed and were pointed out to the photographer, who determined to snap them. Mr. Vanderbilt saw the outfit set for the operation and made a decided objection. He accosted the operator and learned that it was his intention to catch the party in a pose for use in a public print. Mr. Vanderbilt said he did not care to have his picture taken publicly and physically opposed it.

Both men struggled for a short time, while the crowd looked on, some encouraging young Vanderbilt and others favoring the photographer. It could not be determined who had the best of the combat. The photographer had his collar torn and Vanderbilt showed unmistakable evidence of the fight. New London officers separated the combatants but did not make any arrests.

ENDS LONG DOG QUARANTINE.

New Rochelle Residents Wild with Joy When the Notice Is Issued.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., June 30.—The dog quarantine, which has been in force in New Rochelle for eight months, was removed to-day by order of Raymond A. Pearson, State Commissioner of Agriculture. He issued this notice:

I hereby cancel notice and order dated Oct. 10, 1910, relating to the disease of rabies in the City of New Rochelle, County of Westchester, and State of New York.

Almost as soon as the notices appeared automobiles and carriages appeared on the streets filled with children, pet dogs, and flowers. The dogs were unmuzzled and the muzzles hung from their collars or from the sides of the vehicles. The children shouted, the dogs barked, and chauffeurs tooted their horns.

Many of the dogs wore huge ribbon bows. A large bulldog sat on the hood of one automobile, with a sign hanging from his neck bearing the legend: "Dog catchers, keep off! My muzzle is gone!"

In Rochelle Park there was a parade of children decked in flowers, each leading a dog by a blue ribbon. Many dog owners paraded their pets past the dog pound.

The attention of the police was called yesterday by Commissioner Waldo to an ordinance passed on Tuesday last by the Board of Aldermen relative to the muzzling and leashing of dogs on the streets and in parks during June, July, August, and September. This gives patrolmen and representatives of the animal society authority to take in charge dogs at large. Dogs will be held for five days, and if not claimed will be killed. They will be returned to their owners upon the payment of $10.

BOY OF SIX SHOOTS SISTER.

Knew About Bullets and Thought He'd Got All Out of the Revolver.

Mrs. Mina Schoen, who lives at 341 East Seventy-seventh Street, with her four children, Herbert, 6 years old; Eleanor, 3; Gertrude, 2, and Blanche, 1, left the children alone yesterday morning to go shopping. Herbert and Eleanor were in the front bedroom and the two younger children in the kitchen.

As soon as his mother left, according to Herbert himself, he went to a bureau and took out a revolver, .32 calibre, five chambers and fully loaded. Herbert said last night that he knew what bullets were, and he took them out of the gun—or thought he did.

Then he pointed the revolver at Eleanor and said he was going to shoot her. The little girl screamed and ran into a corner of the room with her face to the wall. Herbert followed her and, putting the weapon close to her back, pulled the trigger. To his astonishment there was a loud report, and the little girl fell screaming to the floor.

Herbert picked her up, and carrying her to the kitchen tried to stop the flow of blood with towels. Mrs. Schoen returned then, and Herbert told her what he had done. The mother took the child to the German Hospital, at Lexington Avenue and Seventy-seventh Street. Then she reported the matter to the police and Detective Frank Gallagher of the East Sixty-seventh Street Station, after investigation decided that the affair was an accident, and no arrests were made.

The girl may recover.

BELMONT PARK ABANDONED.

Boston Aero Club Will Use the Nassau Boulevard Field.

The Aero Club of America is about to abandon Belmont Park as its official flying home. Arrangements were completed yesterday with the Aero Club of New York, which owns an aerodrome at Nassau Boulevard, L. I., by which the Aero Club of America will use these grounds in the future.

The Aero Club of New York became an affiliated member of the Aero Club of America yesterday, and the arrangement for the use of the former's grounds is to extend for one year from July 1.

A special grounds committee has been named, consisting of Timothy L. Woodruff, President of the Aero Club of New York; James A. Blair, Jr., Vice President of the Aero Club of America; G. F. Campbell Wood, secretary of that body, and W. Irving Twombly and R. R. Sinclair of the Aero Club of New York.

A special course will be laid out for pilot license tests and one for speed and distance trials and contests. The Wright Aviation School, which has been located at Belmont Park, moved to the new aerodrome yesterday, A. L. Welsh making ten flights with pupils and passengers. A. D. McCurdy and the Farman Company of America will also open a flying school at the new aerodrome, where Thomas Sopwith, the English aviator, has already established himself and is booked to make many passenger flights to-morrow.

Besides the necessary sheds and other appurtenances, there is upon the premises a comfortable clubhouse, with sleeping rooms and a restaurant.

It was stated that the obstructions around Belmont Park, made necessary by the exercise of horses there, and the restricted hours for practice, had made it seem inadvisable for the Aero Club of America to make the arrangement with the Aero Club of New York by which the parent organization will have the use of the latter's fine flying grounds.

FLIES 135 MILES WITH A PASSENGER

Atwood in a Biplane Travels from Boston to New London in Two Hours and Ten Minutes.

THEN FOLLOWS BOAT RACE

With Mayor of New London as a Passenger, Zig-Zags Over Course as Crews Strain Below.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW LONDON, June 30.—An unexpected event was added to the Yale-Harvard boat race programme this afternoon by Harry N. Atwood, who with Mayor Bryan F. Mahan by his side for the first time in the history of the regatta followed the 'Varsity eight race in an aeroplane. He had flown over from Squantum Field, Boston, in the morning with his mechanician, James Fleet, as a passenger, a distance of 135 miles, in 2 hours and 10 minutes, which is the longest continuous cross-country flight made in America. He delighted the crowds as the race was in progress by his perfect command of his machine over the river.

Atwood started from Boston at exactly 7 o'clock this morning. He made a bee line for Quincy and then steered by South Braintree and Brockton to Bridgewater, Middleboro, Taunton, Fall River, and Newport were next passed, and then he crossed Narragansett Bay to the tracks of the New York, New Haven & Hartford at Kingston. He followed the railroad to this city, and a few minutes after 9 o'clock the sound of his propeller whirring overhead warned the crowds that something unusual was happening.

They saw the Burgess-Wright biplane, 500 feet in the air, turning up the river, passing over the drawbridge, and then volplaning to a landing on a hill behind the Riverside Iron Works on the west bank. As it passed every yacht let go her whistle and flags of every hue were waved in a wild salute. The crowd rushed after Atwood and collected around his machine in so dense a mass that the farmer to whom the field belonged ordered him away.

Atwood telephoned to the New London police and E. S. Neilan of the Business Men's Association hurried out to fetch him in an automobile. With his mechanician he was brought to the Crocker House, where the Mayor greeted him and offered him the freedom of the city. In return Atwood invited Mr. Mahan to take a flight with him in the afternoon.

Atwood started his twin propellers and soared up stream just as the 'Varsity eights were being held at the starting point for the pistol. The crews got the word and were bending themselves to the task, and the machine, like a gigantic hawk, swooped down toward the water at the navy yard bend.

With a graceful sweep it went up stream, rising over the crews and, in a circle, swinging in behind them. But the human engines which were driving the cedar shells through the water were no match for the biplane, and in a moment the aviator was leading the way down stream. Round again he came, and in a series of circles made his way a mile back again. He turned and followed in the wake of the crews till he caught them up a second time, and ascended above them in circles.

As the crews were entering the home stretch Atwood dropped to within 300 feet of the river, and then, suddenly dipping his planes, swept along over the water until it seemed as if he would touch it. He soared suddenly upward over the drawbridge on which the observation train had stopped, and then, dropping nearly to the water below the bridge, completed a circle, and rose to return up the river.

Another thrill came to the tens of thousands who were watching the biplane in preference to the race when the aviator dipped almost to the water as the Harvard crew crossed the line. Then, following the lane formed by the gayly decorated yachts, he steered straight up the course for a mile until abreast of Riverside Heights, to which he flew and landed his passenger.

Mayor Mahan said he had a very exhilarating flight.

Mayor Mahan in talking to-night of his experience, declared:

"Automobiles are not in it with airships. I wasn't the least afraid after we had reached the river, for I can swim like a duck and the weight didn't bother me. When Mr. Atwood made his ascent I stood up in the biplane and was just ready to jump, but the machine suddenly darted upwards and fairly bounded along the lanes marking the course.

"I saw a number of my friends as I swept past. I waved my handkerchief to them, but we flew too fast for them to recognize me."

Atwood and his mechanic are scheduled to fly to Mineola, L. I., to-morrow morning, starting at 7 o'clock, and he declared to-night that he did not see any reason why he should not cross the Sound without special difficulty.

The best previous cross-country flight in America was made by P. O. Parmelee in Texas with Lieut. Foulois as passenger. This flight was made in April, when he flew 106 miles from San Antonio to Eagle Pass.

Arch Hoxsey, who lost his life at Los Angeles last December, held the previous American record for a cross-country flight. On Oct. 8 1910, he left Springfield, Ill., in a Wright biplane and flew to St. Louis, a distance of 104 miles, without a stop. Walter Brookins, also a Wright aviator, flew from Chicago to Springfield, Ill., a distance of 187 miles, on Sept. 29. In making that flight, however, he alighted twice, his best continuous distance being 88 miles.

Previous to these flights Charles K. Hamilton and Glenn H. Curtiss had made the best American cross-country records. Hamilton flew from New York to Philadelphia and return for a prize offered by The New York Times, and Curtiss made the trip down the Hudson from Albany to Governors Island for The New York World prize. The American records do not compare favorably with those made abroad, cross-country events having been the feature of all the contests there since the beginning of the year.

CANADIAN PACIFIC TO CONTROL ERIE

Will Acquire a Master Interest and Work with, but Not Annex, the Railroad.

PLANS BINDING ALLIANCE

The Canadian System Wants a Better Eastern Connection Now That New Haven and B. & A. Are Linked.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, Canada, June 30.—There will be no official absorption of the Erie by the Canadian Pacific. For some time there has been a working agreement, and this is now being extended and broadened to embrace certain details of freight and passenger traffic which will enable both systems to materially enlarge their working ground.

There is over $2,000,000 of Erie stock held privately in Montreal. The Canadian Pacific will shortly acquire a controlling financial interest in Erie, but will not annex the system. Mr. Shaughnessy's intention is to establish such a working agreement as shall bind Erie and Canadian Pacific together, to the exclusion of the Hill interest. The basis for such arrangements has already been settled between himself and President Underwood, but there will be no shaking of the stock market over it.

Presidents Underwood and Shaughnessy in a recent interview here fixed the details of the agreement, but these will not be made public for some time.

It was learned yesterday that, while no traffic arrangements have yet been made by the Canadian Pacific to get into New York over the Erie, informal discussions of the matter may result in an agreement of this nature. Bankers in touch with the situation scouted the suggestion that the Canadian interests have already obtained stock control of the Erie. It is known, however, that a number of Canadian capitalists have been buying Erie shares in the open market for personal investment or speculative purposes. This group includes several Canadian Pacific men, it is said.

F. D. Underwood, President of the Erie, is at his Summer home near Milwaukee. J. C. Stuart, Vice President in charge of operation, has been to the Pacific Coast on a vacation. It was said that there was no significance in his choice of the Canadian Pacific route for his return trip. He will be in New York next week. No formal proposal to link up the Canadian Pacific and Erie has been made to the Erie Directors.

An operating man, familiar with the situation, said that the proposal of the Canadian road to exchange traffic with the Erie was the outcome of recent railroad politics. To meet the competition of the Grand Trunk, which has been taking freight by boat from New York to Providence, President Mellen of the New Haven arranged for the interchange of traffic with the Canadian Pacific, with which he has a connection over the Boston & Maine. When the New Haven, a few months ago, obtained what amounts practically to a half interest in the Boston & Albany, as the result of preparations to compete for much of that road's local business, it became to the New Haven's advantage to turn much of the business which formerly went to the Canadian Pacific over to the Boston & Albany, half of whose annual deficit must be borne by Mr. Mellen's road. The Canadian line thereupon set out to make more advantageous terms with another line getting into New York, according to this authority.

It was pointed out yesterday that the Canadian Pacific's financial position would make it comparatively easy for that system to acquire a controlling interest in the Erie, but the report that this had been accomplished received little credence in Wall Street. The buying operations of Montreal interests helped all three issues of Erie to make new high records for the year yesterday.

If the traffic agreement under consideration becomes effective, the Canadian Pacific will have a route from the Northwest to New York City via Chicago and the Erie, owing to its ownership of the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie and Wisconsin Central, but it is not probable that much business would move by this route. The important connection is at Black Rock, near Buffalo, where the Canadian Pacific connects over the Toronto, Hamilton & Buffalo. It is at this point that freight would be exchanged with the Erie, giving the Canadian line a much longer haul than it would enjoy if it relinquished its tonnage at Chicago.

The Erie Railroad has made preliminary plans for the sale of $16,000,000 of equipment trust notes and will spend $7,000,000 for new locomotives and cars this Summer. It has put millions into the improvement of its line between New York and Buffalo in the past three years, and the company now has facilities for a much larger volume of business than it has been able to obtain. With the completion of the new Bergen cut the two tracks in the old tunnel which formerly cared for all trains running into the Jersey City terminal are devoted to freight service exclusively.

NEW LINE TO PROVIDENCE.

Grand Trunk Railroad Seeks Terminus for a Branch There.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., June 30.—The Southern New England Railway, the newly organized branch of the Grand Trunk, which will be extended into this city, filed in the Superior Court to-day its route from Palmer, Mass., to Providence. Under the terms of the charter the road must be completed in 1913.

The larger terminus is in the heart of the city, a bridge across the New York, New Haven & Hartford freight yards, a tunnel under Capitol Hill, and a line to the northern boundary of the State, shorter than that of the New Haven Road, are features of the plan.

THREE MEN SHOT IN TRAIN HOLD-UP

Mail Clerk, Expressman, and Brakeman Wounded and Conductor Hit with a Stone.

ROBBERY NEAR ERIE, PENN.

Philadelphia and Erie Express and Mail Cars Rifled—Passenger Hurled Down 300-Foot Embankment.

Special to The New York Times.

ERIE, Penn., June 30.—A dozen bandits held up and robbed passenger train No. 47 on the Philadelphia and Erie Branch of the Pennsylvania lines five miles east of this city at 10 o'clock tonight. Four men were injured in a battle between the robbers and the train crew. Two are in the hospital. The bandits got away with a number of mail sacks, but it is believed they got nothing of great value.

C. H. Block, a mail clerk of this city, was shot through the right thigh. He emptied two revolvers at the robbers before he fell wounded. Conductor H. D. Rooney borrowed a revolver from one of the passengers and emptied it at the bandits. One of the desperadoes hit him in the back with a stone. He was badly hurt, but he crawled through the woods to a farmhouse and telephoned to this city.

Expressman Hart was shot through the left leg and Brakeman C. F. Bemis suffered a flesh wound.

Word of the hold-up spread through the city, and when the train pulled in at 11:35 over an hour late 5,000 people were awaiting it. Two coaches from the train were filled with policemen and detectives and rushed back to the scene of the hold-up, while word was flashed to all the surrounding towns. Up to a late hour this morning no arrests had been made.

The train was due in this city at 10:10 to-night. A few minutes before 10 o'clock, when the train was making a large curve, the engineer saw an obstruction ahead. He stopped the train with all possible speed, but not before it crashed into ties and telegraph poles that had been placed across the track.

When the train hit the obstruction it was first believed by the passengers that there had been a collision with another train. The next moment, however, the crack of revolvers acquainted them with the real cause of the train's stoppage.

As the train came to a standstill several of the passengers alighted to ascertain the trouble. Their presence drew the fire of the band of masked men, and there was a stampede to re-enter the cars.

An unknown passenger, who, braver than the rest, caught hold of one of the robbers, was picked up bodily and thrown over a 300-foot embankment. His condition is serious. The man's head, face, and body were badly cut and his clothing torn from his back. He was taken to a hospital in an unconscious condition.

The spot selected by the robbers was ideal for their work. On one side of the railroad is a large ravine, and on the other side is a dense wood. The men had hidden among the trees. It was from this point that all of them made their appearance when the train came to a stop.

Almost before the train had reached the obstruction the masked band had taken up their position at practically every entrance to the cars. When the passengers began pouring from the train there were a few sharp cries from the men to get back into the cars.

When a number of the excited passengers failed to take this advice the bandits opened fire. They shot along the sides of the cars, level with the windows, and this effectively put an end to the curiosity of the passengers. Within the cars there was a panic. A number of women fainted, while the screams of others caused much confusion.

A large number of those aboard were from Philadelphia, Buffalo, and intermediate points. The train was made up of four day coaches and two Pullmans. It meets the through Philadelphia and Buffalo train at Emporium, Penn.

According to the opinion here it is not a train that old-time robbers could be expected to attack. It is believed the bandits were foreigners.

Within a few moments after word of the hold-up was received here every policeman in the city was sent to the place where it occurred. Late to-night the surrounding country was dotted with men and lanterns searching for the men and contents of mail bags and valuable packages taken from the train.

The hold-up occurred on the sharpest curve on the division and at a desolate spot on the line. Dispatchers at the division office here received a report at 10 o'clock that the train had passed Belle Valley, the last telegraph station before this city. The train then was on time and due here ten minutes later. Fifteen minutes passed and then thirty without the train arriving, and railroad officials grew anxious. At 11 o'clock a weak voice called by telephone and said:

"We've been robbed! We've been robbed! Maybe lots are shot."

It was the report of Conductor Rooney to the officials and their first intimation of the robbery.

DYNAMITE IN TUG'S COAL.

Fireman Discovers 18 Sacks in Coaling the Lieut. Harris at San Diego.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., June 30.—The possible destruction of the United States Army tug, Lieutenant George M. Harris, was prevented this morning by the discovery of eighteen small sacks of dynamite mixed with coal on the wharf at which the vessel was coaling.

The discovery was reported to Major George H. McManus, commanding Fort Rosecrans, and an investigation was begun. Officers of the tug and of the fort refused late this afternoon to make any statement regarding the matter other than to admit that an inquiry was under way.

The Lieutenant Harris is one of the finest vessels in its class on the Pacific coast. The coal which was being taken aboard came from the regular coaling supply sheds. The fireman who made the discovery of the explosive noticed a piece of burlap sticking out of the pile and pulled it out. It proved to be a small sack containing dynamite. The whole pile on the wharf was then turned over with the result of finding seventeen other sacks.

BIDDLES ALMOST DROWNED.

Boy and Girl Rescued Half Senseless from Atlantic City Surf.

ATLANTIC CITY, June 30.—Livingston Biddle, 15 years old, and his sister, Cordelia, 17, brother and sister of Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, were almost drowned in the surf here this morning. The children, with James Lalew, Jr., 18 years old, went for a swim in the surf, and were having a fine time when the younger boy felt himself in the grip of the undertow being carried out to sea.

Miss Biddle saw her brother's danger and swam to his side. She had not the strength necessary to haul her brother to shore, and found that it was all she could do to keep afloat herself. Lalew, who had remained near shore, saw them then for the first time, and shouting for help, set out toward them.

The older boy reached the Biddle children and managed to keep both afloat while Life Guards Brady and Conover set out to their help, carrying can life buoys with ropes attached. The ropes proved too short, but by leaving Brady at the first buoy, where he held the line of the other, Conover was able to reach the children. They were half unconscious when brought ashore and were hurried to the Biddle cottage in Suffolk Avenue, where they soon revived.

RUSH HOUR SUBWAY TIE-UP.

Short Circuit at 96th Street Confuses Express Service.

A northbound ten-car Broadway Subway express got short circuited just as it was pulling out of the Ninety-sixth Street station at 6:30 o'clock last night and for fifteen minutes all express trains were blocked.

There was a display of vivid blue fire and bright golden sparks when the short circuit occurred, and for a moment there were the makings of a panic among passengers in the stalled train. They were quieted by the guards.

Meantime other express trains throughout the tunnel were stalled or compelled to creep along 300 yards at a time between stations while fat passengers sweltered and indignantly watched local trains whizz gayly by them.

EXPLOSION IN NEW SUBWAY.

Fire Wrecks Hoisting Station Near Brooklyn Academy of Music.

A fire alarm from the box outside the Brooklyn Academy of Music sent Chief Lally and some extra apparatus hurrying to Ashland Place, Brooklyn, shortly before 11 o'clock last night. The fire proved not to be in the Academy, however, but in the Fourth Avenue Subway excavation, where there had been an explosion, of what sort is still undetermined, near two big dynamos used in the hoisting plant.

Nearly 100 laborers at work in the ditch fled at the first sound, and when the firemen got there there was no one to explain what had happened. The blaze was put out after it had destroyed the hoisting station and the wood work in about fifty feet of the tunnel.

$5,000 CHECK LOST 15 YEARS.

H. Gassaway Davis's Company Sent It to Jersey City, Where It Was Mislaid.

George T. Bouton, Clerk of the Jersey City Street and Water Board, retired yesterday after thirty years of service, and while cleaning out his desk, found a certified check for $5,000 that had been tucked away among some papers for fifteen years. The check was drawn by the Davis Coal and Coke Company of West Virginia. It had accompanied a bid for coal which had been unsuccessful.

The company apparently had never missed it, or else had canceled it. Mr. Bouton forwarded the check to the company. Henry Gassaway Davis, one-time candidate for Vice President of the United States, is the owner of the company.

OLDEST NEWSBOY LOSES JOB.

MIDDLETON, June 30.—George P. Ward, 78 years of age, said to be the oldest newsboy in the world, wept bitterly this morning when he was told at the office of the news company that employed him that the place he has filled so long had been given to "Billy" Price, 12 years old, who, his employers think, can cover the ground much faster.

Mr. Ward was once one of Middleton's large property holders, but through misfortune and the duplicity of others he lost every cent of his fortune some years ago, and since that time has been supporting himself by delivering papers about the city. His route covered 15 miles, and he delivered over 300 papers daily.

SAXONIA HELD AT QUARANTINE

One Death Aboard to be Investigated —Railroad Superintendent Ill on Ship.

The steamer Saxonia, which arrived last night from Mediterranean ports, was detained at Quarantine because of the death during the voyage of a steerage passenger. A bacteriological examination is to be made to determine the cause of death.

While the steamer was in midocean a steerage passenger attempted suicide by cutting his throat with a pocket knife.

William H. Wright of Savannah, a Superintendent of the Central of Georgia Railway, who with his wife was returning from Italy on the steamer, was taken suddenly ill. Although he was slightly improved when the liner arrived his condition is still serious.

DRIFTS TO SEA WITHOUT FOOD

Escaping from His Nurse, Young Man Sails Into Vineyard Sound.

COTUIT, Mass., June 30.—In the midst of Vineyard Sound a young man named Linn of Tampa, Fla., is believed to be sailing or drifting to-night in a small sailboat, without food or drink, unless he has been picked up by some vessel or has fallen overboard and been drowned.

Linn was hit by a ball during a baseball game this Spring and was affected mentally. He was brought here to recuperate in the care of a trained nurse, R. L. Sawyer. Last night he escaped and embarked in the sailboat Waterwitch. Her tender was found to-day, empty and beached on the shore, and the search for the young man was at once begun.

ALBANY, June 30.—Although the Gitlins bills designed to make less stringent the anti-race track gambling laws are still pending in the Legislature, hundreds of telegrams have been received by Gov. AWARD TO B.R.T.' INTERBORO OUT

Shonts Has Until Next Thursday to Reply, but Says Subway Terms Are Impossible.

ORDER CONTRACTS PREPARED

Service Commissioners Plan to Start Construction of Lexington Ave. Section at Once.

CRAM ANNOUNCES DISSENT

Tells Colleagues He'll Move Next Week to Build Seventh Ave. Line and Let Interboro Third Track Elevateds.

Yesterday's developments brought the subway situation several stages nearer the final determination provided in the McAneny report. The day produced these results:

First—The Board of Estimate, in the morning, by a unanimous vote, adopted the supplemental report of the McAneny committee and the Public Service Commission, which gives the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company immediately the forty-one miles of new rapid transit lines apportioned to it in the compromise plan and holds that company as residuary legatee of the balance of the new lines if the Interborough does not accept the city's final terms before next Thursday.

Second—President Shonts of the Interborough, late in the afternoon, told reporters that his company was out of the bidding. The city's final concessions to the Interborough, he declared, did not meet the objections to the McAneny report which his company and its bankers considered vital, and no further offer would be put in.

Third—The Public Service Commission, acting almost coincidently with the Board of Estimate, adopted a resolution instructing counsel to prepare for adoption by the commission next Wednesday contracts for such sections of the new subways as may be let immediately. These sections include Lexington Avenue, from Twenty-seventh Street to 102d Street, and cover a stretch of road which will be built, whichever company gets the Lexington Avenue contract. The contract will go to the Board of Estimate next Thursday.

Fourth—Commissioner J. Sergeant Cram, whom Gov. Dix appointed against the protest of Mr. McAneny to displace Edward M. Bassett, served notice on his colleagues in the Service Board that he was against the financial arrangements which the McAneny report proposed for the Brooklyn Rapid Transit, and at next week's meeting would move to build the Seventh Avenue subway from Times Square south, and to award the elevated third tracking contracts to the Interborough.

Fifth—Letters transmitting the city's final decision were sent to the Interborough and the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Companies, and upon receipt of replies to these letters next week the board will take its final action before the preparation of the actual contracts, according to the schedule laid out by Borough President McAneny, before it adjourns for the Summer.

Mayor Gaynor Won Over.

Yesterday's meeting of the Board of Estimate lasted less than five minutes. Mayor Gaynor on the previous day had spoken about requiring further time to consider such modifications of the original McAneny report as the supplemental report might contain, but through the good offices of Controller Prendergast a preliminary conference was arranged at which the Mayor was satisfied with the last modifications to the B. R. T. and the Interborough, and consented to vote immediately.

It was 11:20 o'clock when the Estimate Board filed into his big room and the clerk called the roll. Mr. McAneny handed copies of his supplemental report and the accompanying resolutions over to Mayor Gaynor, and the Mayor, saying that everybody had read the report, passed it on to the clerk for the roll call.

Before the vote was taken President Mitchel of the Aldermen asked to make a statement, and registered his objections to the concession to the Interborough by which the city waives, in the event of the leveling of both the Interborough leases on a forty-nine-year basis, the right to claim a readjustment of the rental paid to the city at the expiration of the original term of each lease. Mr. Mitchel said he believed this arrangement would cost the city many millions, but that in the interest of getting action on so important a matter, he was prepared to waive his own objection and vote for the report.

The clerk then called the roll on the final report of the McAneny committee and it was adopted without a dissenting vote.

Lines the B. R. T. Gets.

The vote of the Board of Estimate assured the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company of contracts to operate the following lines:

Broadway, Seventh Avenue, and Fifty-ninth Street, in Manhattan, from the Battery to the Queensboro Bridge, with a new tunnel to Brooklyn, and an elevated extension from the Queensboro Plaza southerly through Jackson and Manhattan Avenues to a connection with its present elevated lines in Williamsburg.

The Fourth Avenue Brooklyn Subway, with a connection with the Broadway line in Manhattan, a connection with the Brighton Beach line in Brooklyn, and the Fort Hamilton and Co

HARVARD TRIUMPHS EASILY ON THAMES

Beginning of Yale's Defeat.

Sixteen oars dug the water, probably every one with a different mind directing its course, but the eight Crimson blades cut in and out quickest and straightest. Nearly every Yale oar threw more water than was necessary, for when the crews got to the first quarter mile the Yale boat was a little to the left of the course. The Harvard boat was a little to the right. The Yale boat was a little behind, but was rowing in smoother water as a result. The Harvard boat was in rougher water, but didn't let down. A forty-stroke pace was set by the Crimson, and after a mile was traveled, when she had open water between her rudder and the Blue's bow.

Yale was getting desperately, but in a last spurt Harvard forged ahead. Bruce Ingraham, who had been coaching the Harvard eight, thought for the eight brown-backed young giants with the red pennants on their oars, about as husky a looking lot as ever sat in a scientific boat. They were showing all they knew, too, and their whole work and other features of rowing form were to the Thames standard. Another Harvard boat Yale were doing. There was no doubt in the minds of Cornell coaches which Courtney is said to have picked as No. 1, for the other day when he declared that his crew followed his orders explicitly in letting Columbia pass the Ithacans by, he declared that Cornell was not to be beaten. Yale was trying to keep some same stamina of a struggle with a 36 stroke, but it was no use. The times at the mile were: Harvard, 5:30; Yale, 5:44.

Harvard had let up just another little bit in the next stage, and 32 were clicked to one of the minutes the experts took account of. Yale, too, had slowed, both in the run of the boat and the stroke. Then Harvard began giving it to her a bit more, and the Yale crew fell away. Yale's men were losing their form, killing, and leaving rowing fall apart. It doesn't benefit any one, especially when the race is not half over. The times at a mile and a half: Harvard, 8:31; Yale, 8:51.

Grit in Yale Boat.

But there was grit in the Yale boat if nothing else. Five hundred yards before the mile and a half mark Harvard began to spurt, and with a long, powerful stroke, that was a beautiful thing to see, the Crimson crew began to draw away from the Blue. Yale's coxswain, Jack Hallowell, threw his body backward and forward in time with the rowers, and urged them on. Yale's stroke, Bill Cook, increased the pace to 38 strokes to the minute, and the Blue crew responded gamely. Yale's men were rowing with all their might, but Harvard's were rowing with all their might and main. Yale's men were rowing with a fierceness that was not to be denied, but Harvard's men were rowing with a fierceness that was not to be denied

STEEL WIRE MEN TO PLEAD JULY 5

No Warrants Issued, but They Are All Expected to Answer Conspiracy Charge.

GARY FROWNED ON POOLS

Head of Steel Corporation Said to Have Ordered Associates to Keep Out of Them.

The eighty-three steel wire and horseshoe men indicted by the Federal Grand Jury as participants in the nine pools having their business centre in the person of Edward A. Jackson, Jr., and their most important member, the American Steel and Wire Company, a subsidiary of the United States Steel Corporation, will begin to enter their pleas in the Criminal Branch of the United States Circuit Court next Wednesday, July 5. The nine indictments are all returned against individuals, and charge a combination and conspiracy in restraint of trade, in violation of the Sherman act.

The action of the Federal Grand Jury created a good deal of a sensation in Wall Street yesterday, where its effect had not been anticipated during the week preceding, in which rumors of action by the Federal authorities against the steel wire pool had been discussed. Lawyers for the United States Steel Corporation, who did not want to have their names used, declared that the nine pools in question had operated without the knowledge of Judge Elbert H. Gary, Chairman of the board and ruler of the Steel Corporation, and that Judge Gary, discovering their existence some time ago, had given strict orders that no company or individual in the Steel Corporation should participate in them.

United States Attorney Wise and his assistants in the steel wire investigation here, John H. Crim and Felix Frankfurter, all left town yesterday for short vacations over the Fourth of July, as they have had strenuous times for the past few weeks with the Grand Jury proceedings against the box board combination and magazine publishers' combination and the steel wire pools. It is expected that a good deal more about the relations or lack of relations between the wire pools and the parent corporation will come out when the Bureau of Corporations at Washington gets ready to send another batch of evidence relating to the steel industry over here for consideration by the United States Attorney and the Grand Jury.

It is known that the ramifications of the steel inquiry are very wide. The bureau at Washington has constructed a huge chart in which the four great groups of subsidiaries of the Steel Corporation are indicated—namely, the steel manufacturing companies, the coal and coke companies, the cement manufacturing companies, and the railroad and transportation companies. The understanding has been that the cement combination would be the next one examined with a view to ascertaining whether it contains a basis for criminal prosecutions under the Sherman act.

What interested the financial community most, however, was the fact that the indictments in the wire case have been brought against individuals and not against their corporations or copartnerships, as has frequently been the rule heretofore. With respect to the entire proceeding touching the Steel Corporation's affairs, the Government is understood to be proceeding on the theory that by taking up the subsidiary industries and the individuals first, a more thorough result can be accomplished than if it undertook to find ground for proceeding against the parent company and afterward found that the acts complained of were confined to certain subsidiaries. The personal touch given to the latest batch of Sherman act indictments has furnished much food for thought.

The information came out yesterday at the Federal Building that Herbert L. Satterlee, son-in-law of J. P. Morgan, and President of the Habirshaw Wire Company of Yonkers, was not considered immune from indictment because he appeared before the Grand Jury. His company was a member of the Rubber Covered Wire Association which makes telephone and telegraph wire. After the inquiry here was under way Mr. Satterlee appeared in the Federal Building and asked to be allowed to testify. He was informed that he would not be allowed to testify under oath or to make any statement, for the reasons, among others that the United States Attorneys already were in possession of the information that he desired to contribute.

No bench warrants were issued for the steel defendants yesterday, as they are all expected to appear without that formality.

LONDON, June 30.—"I only know what I saw in the headlines of the newspapers," said Charles M. Schwab, President of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, when asked to-day for his opinion in connection with the wire indictments. "I do not think that any company in which I am interested is concerned in the matter." Mr. Schwab inquired in what court the indictments were brought, but did not appear to be interested in the case.

Judge Gary, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the United States Steel Corporation, of which the American Steel and Wire Company is a subsidiary concern, declined to-day to discuss the indictments. His only comment was:

"I know nothing about the action, and therefore have nothing to say of it. About all I can say is that I know no reason for the indictments against the companies."

PARIS, June 30.—Frank J. Gould, who as President of the Old Dominion Iron and Nail Works is one of the defendants in the action brought by the United States Government against the alleged "wire pool," is stopping here.

Mr. Gould said to-day that he had learned of his indictment by the Federal Grand Jury at New York only this morning from the press dispatches, which contained the only information that he had concerning the whole question.

He added that he would have no comment to make until he had received fuller and personal information from New York.

WOMAN ABLAZE AT WINDOW.

Badly Burned Before Help Reaches Her from the Street.

A woman enveloped in flames and screaming frantically appeared at a window on the third floor of 131 West Ninetieth Street about 8:30 o'clock last night. She had wrapped a sheet around her, and was trying to beat out the flames. She poised as though to leap from the window, but Joseph Reide, who lives opposite, yelled to her to wait and with two other men dashed up the stairs to the woman's aid. When they reached her she had fallen to the floor unconscious with the burning sheet still around her and her hair in flames.

Reide grabbed a blanket from the bed and rolled the woman in it until the flames were extinguished. Dr. Harrington rushed to the J. Wright Hood Hospital, where it was said later there is little chance of her recovery.

The woman is Mrs. Etta Edia, who lives at the house with her husband. Just how she set fire to herself is not known. She was disrobed, and it is thought that she was curling her hair, when the iron set her hair afire.

LATSON A SUICIDE, JURY QUICKLY FINDS

Aita Marhevka, His Girl Secretary, Who Found the Body, Absolved from All Suspicion.

PHYSICIANS NOT AGREED

Two Testify That the Wound Could Not Have Been Self-Inflicted—Girl Tells Her Story.

Without leaving their seats yesterday afternoon the Coroner's jury in the case of Dr. William R. C. Latson returned a verdict of suicide and completely absolved Aita Marhevka, the physician's secretary, from all suspicion of being connected with his death. The young woman was overcome with emotion when she heard the verdict. She arrived in court early in the morning, accompanied by Harry Heinberger, her counsel.

Dr. Sidney W. Smith of the J. Hood Wright Hospital was the first witness. He testified that on May 11 last he answered an ambulance call to Dr. Latson's apartments at 660 Riverside Drive and found the doctor dead. He said he had made no examination of the wound, but had found a revolver lying on the couch under Dr. Latson's abdomen.

Dr. John H. Larkin testified that in his opinion the wound could not have been self-inflicted, as the course of the bullet was against that theory. Coroner's Physician O'Hanlon also testified positively that the wound could not have been self-inflicted. He said he had performed the autopsy upon the body, and added:

"In harmony with my experience of seventeen years as Coroner's physician, I state emphatically that this case was not one of suicide."

Miss Marhevka was then called. She appeared very self-possessed and spoke in a loud voice. She said:

"About 8 o'clock on May 11 I came to 660 Riverside Drive and tried to get into Dr. Latson's apartment. I found it locked. I came to get my key, which I had left there early in the day. I was about to go away when I thought of the open window. As I had my keys on a ring it was absolutely imperative that I should get them or I would be unable to enter my own apartment. I climbed through the window and took off my hat and coat.

"When I switched on the lights I found Dr. Latson lying upon the sofa. I did not go near it because I was stunned by the position of the body. I was agitated and went outside to get assistance. I met a boy in the hall and as I stopped him the door snapped behind me and I asked the boy to go inside and get the keys for me, but he refused, so I went inside through the window again.

"This time I saw the blood and was terribly stunned. I got my coat and hat and came out again, intending to call the Coroner. I was fatigued and nervous. I had had a trying day, and I had left the doctor in the morning realizing that he was ill. Just as I started to 'phone I thought it would be better to notify the doctor's lawyer first and I went home to my apartment after telling the boy that the doctor was ill and should not be disturbed.

"When I got home I was so exhausted that I collapsed, and must have slept for two hours. Then I was awakened by some policemen, who took me back to 660 Riverside Drive."

In reply to Assistant District Attorney Rubin's questions Miss Marhevka said she believed that Dr. Latson's soul still lived. She denied that they had ever had any quarrels.

Mrs. Gertrude Goss, Dr. Latson's sister, said she was the doctor's only relative, and that she lived at 130 Bradhurst Avenue. She said that she did not think that her brother had committed suicide.

Coroner's Physician Weston said he had not seen the body, but believed from what he had been told that the case was one of suicide.

Lieut. William A. Jones of the Central Office, the pistol-shot expert of the Police Department, said that in his opinion the shot might have been self-inflicted.

After the jury had reached a verdict Coroner Feinberg thanked them, and Miss Marhevka shook hands with each member of the jury.

CRAMP DROWNS A SWIMMER.

Victim Almost Drags a Friend Under Before Help Comes.

L. M. Allen, an employe in the Riverside Telephone Exchange, bought a canoe yesterday and took Franklin E. Schiele, a fellow-employe, with him to try it. The young men paddled from 165th Street and the Hudson River to Fort Washington Point, where they beached the canoe and went for a swim.

Schiele soon had a cramp and yelled to Allen, who went to help him, but Schiele threw his arms around Allen's neck and nearly pulled both under. Walter Sheeley of 172d Street and River Avenue saw the struggle and went to help the swimmers.

Before he reached them Allen had got free from Schiele, who sank immediately. Allen was going under, too, when Sheeley reached him and got him ashore. Schiele's body was not recovered.

FIRE HERO BARRED FROM BEING CHIEF

Ahearn Can't Win Promotion Because Hearing Was Affected In Daring Try at Rescue.

PLAN TO REWARD HIM NOW

Civil Service Commission Suggests That He Be Retired on Full Pay, and Mayor Approves.

As the result of physical disability incurred in the performance of his duty, Deputy Fire Chief Thomas J. Ahearn may be retired on full pay. He is a candidate for Fire Chief to succeed ex-Chief Croker, but in taking his civil service examination it developed that he partially lost his hearing while attempting to save a child from a burning building in Rivington Street in 1904. This defect, according to physicians who examined him, is sufficient to bar him from competition. That he might not go unrewarded, James Creelman, President of the Municipal Civil Service Commission wrote yesterday this letter to Mayor Gaynor:

New York, June 29, 1911.

Hon. William J. Gaynor Mayor:

Dear Mr. Mayor—Acting upon reports of medical experts, this commission has been compelled to refuse to permit Mr. Thomas J. Ahearn, a Deputy Fire Chief, to participate as a candidate in the forthcoming promotion examination for Fire Chief of the city, on the ground that his powers of hearing are too much impaired to make it possible for him to perform all the duties of that extremely important position.

On April 8, 1904, Mr. Ahearn, then a Chief of Battalion in the Fire Department, was present in the regular performance of his duty at a fire in the ground floor flat at 233 Rivington Street at midnight. He was informed that a child was cut off in a back room in the burning part of the building. Without a moment's hesitation he began to crawl on his hands and knees through the fire and smoke to the room where the child was said to be; but when he got to the room he found that there was no child there. By that time it was impossible for him to get back to the street by the way in which he came. He was overcome by the smoke, but managed to struggle to his feet, and tried to kick down the door leading to the hallway. He was overcome a second time. When the firemen reached him they found his foot sticking through the hole he had made in the door. His head had been roasted by the flames and his helmet was completely burned, except the metal parts. For thirteen months Mr. Ahearn was in the hospital as a result of his frightful injuries, and during six months of that time he was irrational.

The permanent result of Mr. Ahearn's brave act was the aggravation of a slight defect in his ability to hear. One of his ears was almost burned off. Medical evidence shows that but for the sacrifice made by him on that night, for the sake of the life of a little child, he would now be competent to take part in the promotion examination for Fire Chief.

It seems to me—and my fellow Commissioners join in the suggestion—that this is a proper case and a proper time for the city to do something to recognize Mr. Ahearn's heroism, and to partly compensate him for the loss he suffers in being shut out of the examination for Fire Chief.

Sincerely yours,
JAMES CREELMAN, President.

The Mayor replied: "I agree with you that his case is one which should receive special consideration, and I am referring your letter to the head of the Fire Department."

REICHMANN GETS PENITENTIARY TERM

Convicted Banker Sentenced to Four and a Half Months, but Fights for Delay.

WON'T AID PROSECUTOR

Sets at Rest Reports That He Would Testify Against Hyde and Cummins in Carnegie Trust Cases.

Joseph B. Reichmann, ex-President of the Carnegie Trust Company, who was convicted on Wednesday of making a false report to the State Banking Department on the condition of that company, was sentenced to four and one-half months in the Penitentiary by Justice Vernon M. Davis in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court yesterday. All doubt as to whether he would testify for the prosecution in the cases of William J. Cummins and ex-City Chamberlain Charles H. Hyde was set at rest by Reichmann himself yesterday when he announced in the Sheriff's office that he would absolutely refuse to testify.

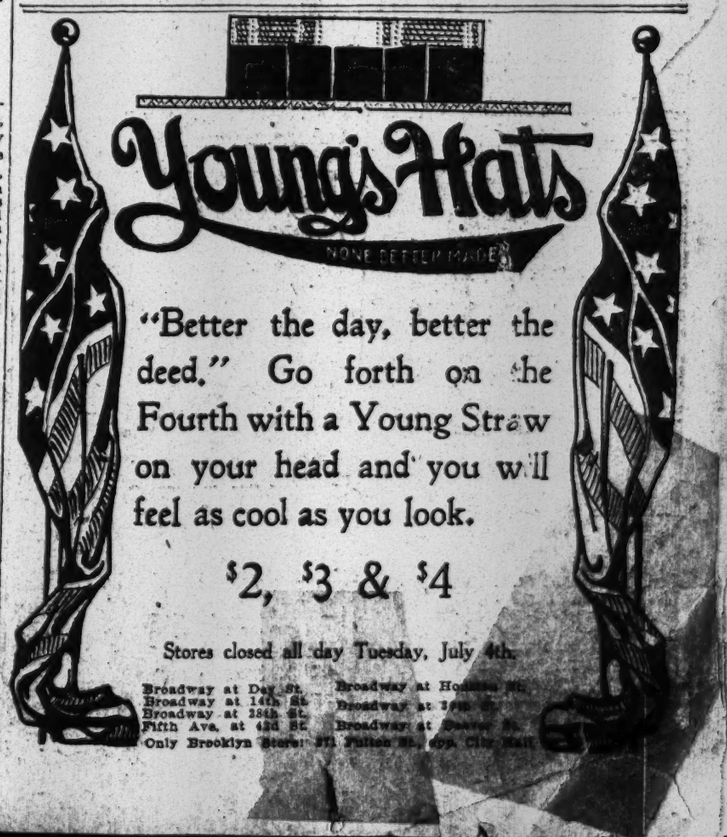
When Reichmann was called to the bar yesterday for sentence his counsel, Stephen C. Baldwin, moved for an arrest of judgment, saying that in his opinion the court had no jurisdiction in the case, and that the facts in the indictment were not sufficient to constitute a crime. Justice Davis denied the motion and Mr. Baldwin then asked for a new trial. This motion was also denied, and after sentencing Reichmann Justice Davis ordered that the execution of the sentence be delayed until Wednesday in order to give Reichmann's counsel every opportunity to take any steps he might see fit.

Later in the day Supreme Court Justice Erlanger signed an order directing the District Attorney to show cause why an application for a certificate of reasonable doubt should not be granted. This order is returnable in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court on Monday next.

Reichmann was not taken to the Tombs at once, but Sheriff John S. Shea, in whose custody Reichmann was paroled by Justice Davis, took him into the Sheriff's office on the second floor of the Criminal Court Building, where he remained until shortly after 5 o'clock, when he was removed to the Tombs. While in the Sheriff's office Reichmann talked freely to the reporters, and said to a question put to him as to whether or not he would confess and thus aid in the prosecution of Cummins and Hyde:

"I never have accepted charity or pittance of any sort from any one, and do not propose to do so at the present time or any time in the future. All I ask is a fair and impartial hearing throughout in my fight for vindication, which I will carry to the court of last resort. I have had no overtures from any one, and I would not accept any compromise of that nature at any cost."

Just before Reichmann was arraigned for sentence a Federal process server handed him papers in a suit to declare him a bankrupt. The petition was filed against him on April 12 last and is signed by James S. Watson, Herbert Hatfield, and Herbert C. Brewster.



"Better the day, better the deed." Go forth on the Fourth with a Young Straw on your head and you will feel as cool as you look.

Mrs. Titus Made $55,000 in 1909—Assistants Earn $500 a Month for Her—She Loses Case.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, June 30.—Mrs. Louise Winterfeldt, a wealthy New York woman who for some seasons past has been a visitor at the Hotel Ritz, where her gowns and general get-up have frequently attracted attention, was the defendant in a curious action heard today in the King's Bench Division, the plaintiff being a beauty specialist, Mrs. Helena Titus, who sued to recover damages from Mrs. Winterfeldt, charging her with wrongfully inducing an assistant of the plaintiff, Miss Stock, to break her contract of employment and detaining her after the breach of contract.

Mrs. Winterfeldt denied the charge and said Miss Stock accepted employment with her as her secretary with the consent of Mrs. Titus. Counsel for the plaintiff stated that Miss Stock was engaged in March, 1908, by Mrs. Titus, who carried on her business in Grafton Street under the name of "Helena Rubinstein & Co.," as complexion specialists, for a period of three years. She was to receive 7s. 6d. (about $2) weekly the first year, 15s. (nearly $4) for the second year, and £1 ($5) the third year.

Among her customers in 1908 was Mrs. Winterfeldt, who made thirty-six visits to the beauty parlors, where she was attended by Miss Stock on twenty-six of these occasions. At the end of 1908 Mrs. Winterfeldt decided to return to America. She had taken a fancy to Miss Stock, and being desirous of continuing the treatment, proposed to take Miss Stock to New York with her. Mrs. Titus explained that Miss Stock was bound to her for three years, but it was arranged that Miss Stock should go to New York and continue the treatment for three months, Mrs. Winterfeldt to pay Mrs. Titus during the period £150 ($750) a month. Mrs. Winterfeldt sent a letter from the Hotel Ritz inclosing a check payable to Mrs. Titus for part of the money.

At the expiration of the three months Miss Stock had not returned to England, and Mrs. Titus thereupon went to New York and by telephone arranged an interview with Mrs. Winterfeldt. What had happened in the meantime was this: Miss Stock wrote to Mrs. Titus on March 14, 1909, as follows:

524 Fifth Avenue.

I am writing to ask you a favor. You said to me just before leaving that perhaps Mrs. Winterfeldt would want to keep me altogether. This morning she made a most generous offer, which I would like to accept, as her secretary. She offers me £200 ($1,000) a year and all expenses paid, and a three months' holiday a year to go to England if I want to and travel everywhere with her.

If you very much want me to return, of course I shall do so, but in that case will you cable me? If you are in New York will you telephone Mrs. Winterfeldt's country seat and she will motor in to see you.

I hope you will not mind me deserting you. New York suits me so well. I am getting quite fat.

On June 13, 1909, Mrs. Titus wrote Mrs. Winterfeldt, who thus replied:

I was very much surprised to receive your letter of June 13, and can only repeat what I told you. That matter was entirely between you and her. I remember saying that if she wanted to return she could do so by the next steamer. As you did not tell her to she did not.

Mrs. Titus, in giving evidence, said she did not consent to Miss Stock remaining with Mrs. Winterfeldt. It was very difficult to get another assistant to take Miss Stock's place, and in conquence she had to refuse business. There were many different kinds of treatment, and they took months to learn. Assistants, she said, should be girls of tact, naturally. A good assistant would earn for her from £80 to £150 ($400 to $750) a month, the average being about £100 ($500) a month. Here Justice Bray said:

"Two hundred and fifty pounds a month makes one's mouth water. Why didn't you immediately engage somebody and teach her?"

"They are very difficult to get," witness said.

"That is no reason why you should not have tried," said the Judge.

Witness: "It was the season of May, June, and July, which are our busiest months."

Mrs. Titus said that she engaged several girls, but they were useless and had to be sent away. Her fees for treatment ranged from 1 to 6 guineas. That, she said, was not all profit.

The expenses of business for different branches amounted to £20,000 a year. The item of advertising alone was very expensive.

Cross-examined by counsel for the defendant, Mrs. Titus said she had five complexion assistants, three typists, three girls making up preparations, and a lady doctor.

"What proportion of the £500 a week taken in by the five assistants is net profit?"

"It depends."

"Take a guinea case. How much of that would go in preparations?"

"A few shillings. Some preparations are very expensive."

Justice Bray: "Have you any book which shows the cost of material?"

Witness: "We have all the invoices. I do not keep books. It is a cash business."

Witness also said she made a profit of £5,000 ($25,000) a year from one of her businesses.

"You wanted a girl assistant with tact and good manners?"

"Yes."

"Are they hard to get?"

"Yes."

"Do you generally start them at 7s. 6d. a week?"

"Yes, unless they pay a premium."

"Then it is a common thing to give a girl from 7s. 6d. to £1 a week, who makes roughly about £800 or £900 a year net profit for you?"

"No, it is not net profit."

"You know Miss Stock was employed by Mrs. Winterfeldt as secretary, and not as a complexion treater?"

"How do I know?"

"Miss Stock couldn't continue the treatment when her supply of your wonderful creams was exhausted?"

"She took two years' supply with her," responded Mrs. Titus, and the cream could be obtained by post.

An accountant for the plaintiff brought forward some figures showing that the takings for beauty treatment during the season of 1909 were nearly £11,000, or an average of £140 a week. The sales of preparations amounted to £12,823, or an average of £164 a week.

Mrs. Winterfeldt, smartly attired in a gray costume and wearing a pretty black hat, said she lived with her husband in Scarborough, N. Y., but had come over specially to give evidence in this action.

Cross-examined, she did not know that Miss Stock was an apprentice or bound to the plaintiff for three years. She was absolutely unaware of any agreement. She had not received any treatment from Miss Stock since the supply of creams was exhausted in March, 1909.

Miss Stock also appeared in the witness box.

"When did you commence treating patients after you entered the plaintiff's service?" she was asked.

"About two or three weeks after I was allowed to work on poorer clients." (Laughter.)

"They were guinea patients, I suppose," suggested counsel.

No, half a guinea. (Laughter.)

Justice Bray eventually gave a verdict for the defendant with costs. A stay of execution was granted.

BOTTOMLEY TO PAY $250,000 DAMAGES

London Financier and Editor Charged with Swindling Client by Selling Worthless Stock.

BLACKMAIL, SAYS DEFENDANT

Madras Civil Servant, Supposed to be Wealthy, Died Penniless—"Sucked Dry" by Bottomley, Says Counsel.

LONDON, June 30.—Horatio W. Bottomley, editor, newspaper proprietor, financier, and Liberal member of Parliament for South Hackney, was ordered by Lord Chief Justice Alverstone to-day to pay $250,000 damages to the estate of the late R. E. Master, a retired Madras civil servant.

It was charged that Mr. Bottomley had obtained $285,000 through misrepresentation by selling to Mr. Master worthless shares in numerous undertakings promoted by Mr. Bottomley.

The plaintiff was Mrs. Curtis, a daughter of Mr. Master. The latter was supposed to have been wealthy, but he died penniless. An investigation of his papers was made, and it was discovered that Mr. Master had been concerned in big financial deals with Mr. Bottomley and Terah Hooley, another promoter whose meteoric career astonished the city a few years ago.

Counsel for the plaintiff described Mr. Master as "a poor old deaf and infirm man, who had been sucked dry by Bottomley within five months." He said he hoped that the verdict would result in an inquiry which would put Mr. Bottomley in the dock and render him liable to a long term of penal servitude.

Mr. Bottomley, who heard the verdict unmoved, addressed the jury, declaring that the suit was another of "those blackmailing charges which, in defending, I have almost lived in the witness box during the past ten years. Since the counsel has called me the cleverest thief in the empire, I ask you to brand those responsible for this charge as the most notorious and most discreditable blackmailers of the bar."

The Lord Chief Justice granted a stay of execution on condition that the whole $250,000 be paid into court within a week.

Horatio W. Bottomley holds the record in England for having contested more libel actions than any other man, with the exception of Henry Labouchere, the proprietor of Truth. He founded The London Financial Times, and later a weekly newspaper called John Bull, of which he is the editor. In 1908 Mr. Bottomley was brought before the courts on the charge of conspiracy with three other officers of a financial concern called the Joint Stock Trust and Finance Corporation, Limited. The charge were said to be similar to those for which Whitaker Wright was convicted, but were not on such a large scale. The case began Dec. 1, 1908, and lasted until March 12, 1909. During the proceedings Mr. Bottomley was fined $1,500 for contempt of court in connection with the publication of comments in John Bull.

This was the second criminal prosecution that Mr. Bottomley defended in person, the first being that of Regina vs. Bottomley, in 1898, when he was indicted for alleged offenses against the Hansard Union before the famous Justice Hawkins and a special jury and acquitted after a sensational trial.

He is an effective orator, and possesses personal magnetism, which has enabled him to retain his seat in Parliament in spite of the notoriety he has gained through his financial record. Some idea of the magnitude of his operations may be judged from the fact that in the charges in connection with the Joint Stock Trust and Finance Corporation and the Selected Gold Mines of Australia, Limited, it was alleged that 3,000,000 shares were duplicated. After the Hansard Union scandal, over which he was acquitted, Mr. Bottomley made the shareholders a cash present of $1,250,000. He is credited with being the best "lay" lawyer in London and conducted his own cases against the best legal talent.

During the last four years Mr. Bottomley has come to the front as a Socialist and once addressed an audience of 60,000 in the Royal Albert Hall on the rights of the working man. With all his knowledge of financial and libel laws, Mr. Bottomley has sailed very close to the wind but has never been convicted on criminal charges.

Some years ago he purchased a London evening newspaper, The Sun, which was printed on pink paper. The paper cost him a lot of money in libel actions. It was said that many read his newspapers who were looking for a chance to bring a libel suit against him because of his wealth.

SHIP STRIKE LIKE AN ENDLESS CHAIN

A Settlement Reached in One Quarter Is Followed by a Disagreement in Another.

LONDON POLICE FOR HULL

500 Sent to Quell Riots—That Port and Liverpool Still Tied Up—Suspicious Fires on Arabic.

LONDON, June 30.—The shipping strike has assumed the nature of an endless chain. No sooner is a settlement reached in one quarter than a disagreement appears in another. Both sides charge the other with contravening the arrangements which promised to end the dispute.

Apparently there would be little difficulty in arriving at a compromise with the original strikers—the seamen and firemen—but the dockhands who walked out in support of the claims of their sea-going comrades now insist that the latter should not accept the proposed terms until the shore gangs receive all they demand.

The situation at Hull was so riotous through the night that 500 London police were dispatched hurriedly to that port this morning.

HULL, Eng., June 30.—To-day's conferences between the employers and the striking seamen were fruitless. Later the strikers held a mass meeting at the City Hall and formally refused the proffered concessions. They shouted that they would rather starve than return to work without having gained their demands. Preparations are being made to cope with expected rioting to-night. Probably 30,000 strikers are in the city.

LIVERPOOL, June 30.—Despite all concessions made, the strike situation showed no improvement to-day. The dock hands are now demanding a guarantee that the wage advance will not be merely temporary. The Shipping Federation threatens to take steps that will result in laying up half the shipping tonnage of the country.

The White Star Line to-day declared a lockout against all the men employed upon their Liverpool steamers, with the exception of the officers and engineers, and is trying to obtain non-union crews. The crew of the Red Star liner Zeeland, which is still lying in the river, having been unable to dock yesterday, have joined the strikers.

Another complication has resulted from the refusal of the railway men to handle cargo brought ashore by non-union men.

Three separate outbreaks of fire in different parts of the White Star Line steamer Arabic were discovered and quenched to-day. The vessel is scheduled to sail from Liverpool to-morrow for New York by way of Queenstown. The White Star officials are unable to account for the fires, except that they were started by incendiaries. The flames were discovered in the storerooms and cabins.

All egress from the Arabic has been stopped and police are now on board the steamer searching for possible incendiaries.

AMSTERDAM, June 30.—The cavalry and police cleared the quays of striking seamen to-day. Many men are being brought here from Hamburg to replace the strikers and the steamers are getting away.

BOMB CAUSES MADRID PANIC.

Explodes as Eucharist Procession Passes—Sixty Hurt in Fleeing.

MADRID, June 30.—The Government censor stopped all news dispatches filed with the telegraph companies last night which described disorders in connection with the great Eucharist procession.

It is estimated that sixty persons received more or less severe bruises in a street panic following the explosion of a bomb in Calle Bordadores, near the corner of Calle Mayor, at the moment when the parade was passing through the latter thoroughfare. An arrest was made. No one was injured directly by the bomb, but the crowds who had read predictions of trouble in the morning editions of the Republican papers were alarmed and began to flee. In the crush women fainted and were trod upon. The police eventually restored order and the procession proceeded.

It is estimated that 50,000 persons, including 10,000 workingmen and several thousand clergymen, took part in the parade, which brought the Catholic Congress to a close. After passing through the principal streets from St. Jerome Church, the paraders halted at the Royal Palace where, in the presence of King Alfonso and Queen Victoria, the benediction was pronounced by Cardinal Aguirre. The organizers of the demonstration had warned those who participated to march in silence, lest they provoke a hostile demonstration on the part of the Republicans and anti-clericals who looked on.

PARIS, June 30.—A dispatch to The Temps from Madrid says that the Spanish Government's appointment of Navarro Reverter, former Minister of Finance, as Ambassador to the Vatican augurs a resumption of official relations and that it is believed that the step was hastened by the Eucharist Congress, which had an important influence in the rapprochement of Spain and the Holy See.

KING GEORGE THANKS HIS LOYAL SUBJECTS

Whatever Difficulties Are Ahead, He Believes They Will Unite with Him to Face Them.

HOST TO 100,000 CHILDREN

Telegraph Refers to the "Weight of Representation" Borne by Reid—Hammonds Guests of Women.

LONDON, June 30.—King George to-night issued a message of thanks to his subjects throughout the empire for the unstinted loyalty expressed by them during the coronation period. His Majesty says that it has encouraged him to go forward with the renewed hope that whatever perplexities or difficulties may arise he and his people shall unite in facing them, and that the ultimate outcome will be to the common good. The message reads:

To My People: Now that the coronation and its attendant ceremonies are over, I desire to assure the people of the British Empire of my grateful sense that their hearts have been with me through it all. I felt this in the beautiful and impressive service in the Abbey—the most solemn experience of my life—and scarcely less in the stirring scenes of the succeeding days, when my people have signified their recognition and their heartfelt welcome of me as their sovereign, for this has been apparent not only in the loyal enthusiasm shown in our passage to and from Westminster and in the progresses which we have made in the different districts of London, but also in the thousands of messages of good will which have come to me across the seas from every part of the empire. Such affectionate demonstrations have profoundly touched me and have filled me afresh with faith and confidence.

Believing that this generous outspoken sympathy with the Queen and myself is, under God, our surest source of strength, I am encouraged to go forward with the renewed hope that whatever perplexities or difficulties may be before me and my people we shall all unite in facing them resolutely and calmly and with public spirit, confident that under divine guidance the ultimate outcome will be to the common good.

GEORGE R. I.

Festivities in connection with the coronation, so far as the metropolis is concerned, ended to-day with his Majesty's treat at Crystal Palace to 100,000 of London's poorest children.

The King and Queen Mary personally attended the festival. Their Majesties descended from their carriages and walked among the little guests who, in batches of 25,000, were formed up in the open spaces of Crystal Palace grounds. The whole entertainment was well organized and worked with Kitchener-like precision. The general public was excluded. All side-shows were thrown wide open to the youngsters, who had the time of their lives on the joy wheels, switchbacks, water chutes, and other diversions entirely novel to them.

Premier Asquith and Mrs. Asquith tonight gave a dinner to King George and Queen Mary and many distinguished guests, among whom were Mrs. Lewis Harcourt and Mrs. Waldorf Astor, at the Premier's official residence in Downing Street.

A feature of the entertainment that followed the dinner was a performance of the third act of George Bernard Shaw's "John Bull's Other Island," and of J. M. Barrie's "The Twelve Pound Look." Granville Barker and his wife, Lillah McCarthy, played the principal roles.

In its account of yesterday's coronation thanksgiving service at St. Paul's, The Daily Telegraph to-day made a striking reference to Whitelaw Reid, the American Ambassador. Five men there, said the newspaper, seemed in that intense imperial atmosphere to bear on their shoulders a heavier weight of representation than all the others.

After speaking of the part being played by Premier Asquith and ex-Premiers Balfour and Rosebery in home politics, and by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the Canadian Prime Minister, in Imperial Affairs, its reports of the service continues:

"Last in the small company of notables was Mr. Reid. Perhaps the Ambassador, who is a man little inclined to magnify his personal influence, was regarded yesterday by others as a representative much more than he himself would have claimed. . . . It is a plain fact that to Mr. Reid, more than to any living man, is due the splendid but silent boast that the word 'foreigner' continues to have no meaning whatever as applied between his countrymen and ourselves. Nay, more; we doubt whether there was a more sincere man in all the congregation that met yesterday to return thanks for the successful consecration of our new Sovereign."

John Hays Hammond and Mrs. Hammond were the guests of honor to-day of the Society of American Women in London at a luncheon given at the Hotel Cecil. The affair was attended by 200 women and a score of men.

In the receiving party were Mrs. W. L. Comings, President of the society; Mrs. Herbert Hoover, the Vice President; Mr. and Mrs. Hammond, and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid. Besides these at the head of the table were Major Gen. A. W. Greeley and Mrs. Greeley, Consul General John L. Griffiths and Mrs. Griffiths, William Phillips, Secretary of the American Embassy, and Mrs. Phillips, and Commander Edward Simpson, Naval Attaché of the American Embassy, and Mrs. Simpson. Other guests were Lady Stanley, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Selfridge, Mrs. Harold McCormick of Chicago, Mrs. Linton Satre of New York, Mrs. Clement Grant, Mrs. Theodore Hoover, and Mrs. Lester Ralph.

STEEL TRUST REPORT CHARGES MONOPOLY

Has 75 Per Cent. of Lake Ores and 50 Per Cent. of Production, Says Corporation Bureau.

PROMOTERS GOT $62,500,000

Capitalized at $1,402,000,000, with Tangible Property Worth $682,000,000 —Aimed to Restrict Competition.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—The long expected report from the Bureau of Corporations on the United States Steel Corporation, recently submitted to President Taft, was made public here to-night.

Signed by Herbert Knox Smith, Commissioner of Corporations, the report makes no recommendations and is almost wholly narrative in form. Mr. Smith declares that restriction of competition was a prime object of the organization of the Steel Corporation, or so-called "trust."

Capitalized at $1,402,000,000, the corporation, he asserts, had tangible property worth only $682,000,000. By a constant reinvestment of earnings, however, the report points out, much of the "water" in the company has been eliminated.

The Steel Corporation now owns 75 per cent. of the lake ores, having recently concentrated its efforts to securing these properties. On this point the report says:

"Indeed, in so far as the Steel Corporation's position in the entire iron and steel industries is of monopolistic character, it is chiefly through its control of ore holdings and the transportation of ore."

Discussing in detail how "the impending struggle of the giants" was averted almost overnight by the formation of the great combination of combinations, taking in 250 subsidiary companies controlling 60 per cent. of the total crude and finished steel production of the country, the report says:

Origin of the Trust.

"Until 1898 the bulk of the business was distributed among a very considerable number of concerns. There was sharp competition, modified by frequent pools of greater or less duration and effectiveness."

Then came an era of great combinations, the report continues, with capitalizations ranging from $30,000,000 to $100,000,000, mergers of many small companies, which instead of eliminating competition threatened to bring price cutting on a larger scale than ever before. In 1899-1900 there are three great companies—the Carnegie Company, Federal Steel, and National Steel—dominating the production of crude and semi-finished products, and six concerns—the merican Steel and Wire, American Tin Plate, American Steel Hoop, American Sheet Steel, National Tube, and American Bridge—controlling the lighter finished products.

This was the period when the "struggle of the giants" was impending and when the formation of the United States Steel Corporation was conceived and brought about. All nine of the companies named were combined, and later the Union Steel Company, the Clairton Steel Company, and, in 1907, the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company were taken over. The promoting syndicate putting the deal through netted $62,500,000 in cash.

During the ten years of its operation, the report says, the Steel Trust has paid average annual profits of 12 per cent. on the money invested. In this connection attention is called to the fact that a considerable part of the investment is in undeveloped or unworked properties, showing that dividends from paying properties must be much larger than the average would indicate. Insisting upon computing profits upon a tangible property value basis, the report says that the Steel Corporation in defending its book valuation undoubtedly would claim that there was a "merger value." As to this the Commissioner says:

Merger Value.

"It is probably true that the various properties acquired by the Stcel Corporation, taken together with the organization of this company as a going concern, do have a value in excess of the sum of their values as separate entities. The co-ordination and integration made possible by the combination of such properties under a single control undoubtedly tend to reduce costs, either through economies or through removing the necessity of paying profits to others.

"Further, in so far as the concentration of the industry under control of a single concern gives to it a monopolistic power over prices and production, this may result in an increase in its earning power, and consequently in an increase in its value as a going concern. This involves, however, the reduction of actual or potential competition. To allow a single company, which has secured the bulk of a given industry, credit for such merger value as a basis on which to earn profits raises, therefore, a question of far-reaching public policy. To regard a valuation so arrived at as justifying such profits under these conditions would be reasoning in a circle, because the real question is whether the profits themselves, used to determine the capitalization, were reasonable."

Since the corporation has been directing its efforts particularly toward acquiring and extending complete control over ore properties its percentage of production has decreased. As against 60 per cent. of all crude and finished production in 1901, says the report, the corporation now has not much over 50 per cent., "indicating conclusively the continuous presence of strong and increasing independent production."

However, the Commissioner finds that competition, so far as prices are concerned, has been modified by the policy of "co-operation," inaugurated at the "Gary dinners," about which so much has been said before the Congressional Steel Investigating Committee.

Present Valuation.

The present valuation of the combine's tangible property is placed at $1,187,000,000, as against $1,468,000,000 outstanding securities, an increase of about $487,000,000 in property, while only about $86,000,000 has been added to capitalization.

Reviewing the combine's present position in the industry, the report says that from the beginning the corporation has overshadowed its principal rivals, even exceeding all of its competitors combined, and while in the ten years of operation its control of production has dropped from 60 to 50 per cent. approximately, its position in ore reserves is much stronger.

The advantage of controlling 75 per cent. of the lake ores, on which the industry is based, is materially enhanced by extensive control of rail transportation from the mines to the lakes. In his letter accompanying the report, Commissioner Smith says that in capacity rather than in actual production the corporation is materially stronger than the production figures indicate, and suggests that in case of continued trade depression this strength probably would show itself in increased control.

To-day's report is the first of three parts [illegible] by the Bureau of Corporations [illegible] exhaustive inquiry into the [illegible] and deals with the United States Steel Corporation—the causes leading up to its formation, its actual investment contrasted with its actual investment contrasted with its capitalization, its rate of profits, and its dealings with competitors.

The other reports will be devoted to the independents, those companies not subsidiary to the corporation.

Taft Gives a Place to E. T. Quigley.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—President Taft has appointed Edwin T. Quigley of New York as Assistant Solicitor of the Department of Commerce and Labor, and has designated Major Edwin R. Stuart of the Engineer Corps as Professor of Engineering at the West Point Military Academy. The nomination of Mr. Quigley was sent to the Senate to-day.

TREASURY HAS $38,922,502.

Result of the Government's Economy Shown at End of the Fiscal Year.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—Owing to the great amount of clerical labor involved, the statement from the Treasury will not issue to-morrow showing the financial situation on the last day of the fiscal year. That statement will not be available until Monday, but the tables prepared to-day showing the situation at the close of business yesterday make possible a fair comparison with the financial situation at the close of the last fiscal year. It is a comparison of which the Administration is very proud, and it is believed that the addition of receipts paid in at the last minute to-day will make the showing even better.

To begin with, the working balance in the Treasury which for months stayed around $20,000,000 and below that amount, is to-day reported at $38,922,502. Of far greater importance is the statement that the ordinary receipts of the Government for this year up to the close of business yesterday exceeded the ordinary disbursements by $28,145,877, as compared with a deficit for the same period last year of nearly $3,000,000. The year before that the total ordinary deficit was nearly $59,000,000 and the fiscal year of 1908 showed a deficit of $20,000,000. Not since the boom year of 1907 have ordinary receipts exceeded ordinary disbursements, though that year the excess reached the enormous figure $111,420,530.

For the first time, income from internal revenue and custom was nearly equal. While customs receipts for the year fell $19,000,000, and will stand at about $312,000,000, the internal revenue promises to total $315,000,000, the greatest sum ever collected from that source, which will pass the record-breaking figures of 1908.

An extraordinary feature of this year's excess of ordinary receipts over ordinary disbursements is that it comes near making the Government able to pay expenses on the Panama Canal out of current revenues—a condition the most ardent supporter of the canal never dreamed of. The disbursements for the canal in the year just ended amount to $37,068,905—only $9,000,000 beyond the excess of ordinary receipts over ordinary disbursements, while receipts to date from the sale of the Panama bonds reduce this difference by $4,622,741.

CALLING THE TROOPS HOME

But Enough Will Remain on the Texas Border for Any Emergency.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—Leaving on the Mexican border a military force adequate to meet any emergency that might arise, President Taft to-day authorized the withdrawal of the manoeuvre division of four regiments of infantry, the Ninth Cavalry, and the Fourth Field Artillery. The infantry regiments to be withdrawn have not yet been selected. The movement will be gradual and will consume probably thirty days. The withdrawn troops will return to their home stations. The following troops will remain in Texas:

A brigade of infantry, composed of regiments not under orders to go to the Philippines; two regiments of coast artillery, part of the Third and the Eleventh Cavalry, and part of the Third Field Artillery. The Eleventh Cavalry will probably be stationed at Kerrville, near San Antonio.

The border patrol will not be disturbed, the Fourth, Sixth, and part of the First Cavalry remaining at their present stations. The Twenty-second and the Twenty-third Infantry and the Third Cavalry will remain in Texas.

SIX NAVY CAPTAINS RETIRE.

So Far This Year There Are 26 Vacancies Above Rank of Lieutenant.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—The "plucking" board of the Navy Department was relieved to-day when these six Captains voluntarily retired from active service:

Burns T. Walling of Ohio, commandant of San Juan naval station; James C. Gillmore of Arizona, commanding the armored cruiser Maryland; John M. Orchard of Missouri, commanding the West Virginia; Thomas D. Griffin of Virginia, Captain of the Mare Island Navy Yard; Ben W. Hodges of Mississippi, now on sick leave, and Edward Lloyd of Maryland, commanding the Wabash.

These retirements make a total of twenty-six vacancies in the line of the navy above the rank of Lieutenant, junior grade, during the fiscal year, closing to-day, while the law requires forty vacancies to provide for promotion.

REDUCES INHERITANCE TAX.

Senator Sullivan Has Bill to Keep Large Fortunes in State Jurisdiction.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., June 30.—A bill to offset the effects of the inheritance tax law of last year, which, it is said, has driven large fortunes beyond the jurisdiction of this State, has been introduced by Senator Timothy D. Sullivan. It reduces the rate of taxation and provides for a refund in cases where a tax has been paid to the State on the basis of last year's law, the amount to be refunded being the difference between last year's tax and the rates set forth in the Sullivan bill.

Senator Sullivan's bill fixes the rates on transfers, taxable under Section 220 of the transfer tax law, to father, mother, husband, wife, child; brother, sister or wife or widow of a son or husband of a daughter, or an adopted child, as follows:

One per cent. on amounts from $5,000 to $50,000, 2 per cent. on amounts from $50,000 to $250,000, 3 per cent. on amounts from $250,000 to $1,000,000, and 4 per cent. on amounts more than $1,000,000.

The tax on other transfers made subsequent to July 1 of last year is to be at the following rates:

INSURGENTS GIVE UP RECIPROCITY FIGHT

Convinced of Defeat, They Let Cummins Ask for an Early Vote on Amendments.

HAVE HEARD FROM VOTERS

Iowa Senator Admits Opposition Has Aroused Criticism — Lodge Says Original Measure Will Pass.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—Through Senator Cummins of Iowa, one of the most prominent of the progressives, the insurgents this afternoon on the floor of the Senate renounced any intention of further delaying votes on the Reciprocity bill, and Mr. Cummins made an effort to obtain consent for votes on the various amendments he has introduced on next Thursday, July 6. The friends of reciprocity feared that enough Senators would not have returned by that date to insure the defeat of the amendments, though the ostensible ground for objection to the request was that Mr. Simmons of North Carolina, one of the few Democrats opposing the measure, thought he might not have time to deliver a speech he is preparing against it.

The objection of Mr. Simmons, coupled with a taunting remark from Senator Shively of Indiana, that Mr. Cummins after occupying the floor to the seclusion of his colleagues for three days, wanted to speak on his amendments next Wednesday and then have voting begin the next day, induced Mr. Cummins to withdraw his request, though it is felt that a vote on the amendments will be reached not much later than the date suggested by the Senator from Iowa.

The truth of the matter is that the insurgents are tired of the position they are occupying before the country. Mr. Cummins, in presenting his request to-day, said that he and many of his friends had been severely criticised for seeming to conduct a fight merely for the purpose of postponement. He denied ever having entertained that purpose, and said that he was quite willing to have the Senate express itself on votes on the question at issue. The insurgents have found out at last that they have nothing to gain by delay. They realize and admit that they are pilloried before the country as being now inconsistent with the tariff record they established in the struggle two years ago, and each day shows them that they are not helping matters by extended speeches in defense of their conduct.

Mr. Cummins set himself to the elaborate task of harmonizing his record for the last two years only to be met yesterday by Senator John Sharp Williams of Mississippi with a quotation from a speech of the Iowan delivered in 1904, in which he earnestly advocated Canadian reciprocity, which he now opposes. Mr. Cummins before that was making heavy weather in his defense, but the tilt with the minority member was the last straw, and his motion this morning for an early vote is the result. While that effort failed of its immediate purpose, Chairman Penrose of the Finance Committee is confident that voting will begin soon and be continued till the measure is disposed of.

With the insurgents showing a desire to "get out from under," there remains no one to debate the bill, as its friends long ago decided to rest their case on the popular approval Mr. Taft has already won for the measure. On particular amendments there will be debate, of course, but once the voting begins the end will be definitely in sight. Every one now expects to see the bill sent to the President for his signature before the end of July. Mr. Penrose this morning gave formal notice that when the Senate convenes on July 5 he will move that sessions thereafter begin at 10 o'clock and will ask that all motions for adjournments early in the afternoon be voted down.

Very few insurgents wish to speak, and the majority in favor of the bill will make no further concessions to them in matter of time if they are not ready to go on with the debate. If no one wishes to speak, the bill will automatically be put upon its final passage, and that is an event that may happen at any time.

Mr. Cummins completed his speech today and Mr. Gamble delivered a formal address. The Senate then adjourned on the understanding that when it meets to-morrow it will be simply to adjourn over till July 5.

NAHANT, Mass., June 30.—That the Canadian Reciprocity bill will pass Congress without an amendment of any kind and that the problem of Statewide primaries will be worked out successfully were two opinions expressed by United States Senator Henry Cabot Lodge to-day.

Senator Lodge is spending the week end at his Summer home here.

ADJUSTER HELD FOR PERJURY

Charged with Bringing Damage Suits for Others as His Own.

John W. Saukaitis, an adjuster with offices at 132 Nassau Street and living at Maspeth, L. I., was before Judge Malone in General Sessions yesterday on an indictment growing out of a charge made by Peter Schwartz, an investigator for the Lehigh Valley Railroad, that Saukaitis swore falsely to an affidavit in a suit for damages. Saukaitis was remanded to the Tombs in default of $2,500 bail, and will be rearraigned for pleading on Monday.

According to Mr. Schwartz, Saukaitis was a miner in Shenandoah, Penn., and came later to this city and opened an office at 132 Nassau Street under the name of Rankaus & Saukaitis, adjusters. On July 30, 1909, Saukaitis brought a damage suit against the Lehigh Valley Railroad, as the only living relative of 9-year-old Edward Klimas, who was killed on the Lehigh Valley tracks on May 8, 1909, and who, Saukaitis swore in an affidavit, lived in New York.

Schwartz went to Shenandoah and found Mrs. Anna Klimas, the mother of the boy, who testified before the Grand Jury that the boy had never been out of Shenandoah and was no relative of Saukaitis.

When Saukaitis was taken to the Detective Bureau in the District Attorney's office yesterday Claude T. Lewis, an adjuster and investigator for the Travelers' Insurance Company, identified him as a man who brought suit for $500 against the Travelers' Insurance Company after he had sworn that he was a cousin of John Matusevitch, another miner, who had his eyes blown out by an explosion at Buffalo, N. Y. Mr. Lewis alleges that Saukaitis kept Matusevitch locked up in a house in Brooklyn, and after getting the $500 from the Travelers' put it in his own pocket and put Matusevitch on a train with a ticket and a bottle of whisky, for Cleveland, Ohio.

Learned Abroad About Wool Schedules

Emery, who went abroad as a special representative of the Government to gain information regarding the wool tariff schedule with foreign Governments, was among those arriving yesterday on the Mauretania. He said that his report would be made in Washington and he could not comment upon it in advance.

LUMBER LOBBY USED $75,000.

Active During Tariff Legislation of 1909, When Lorimer Was Elected.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—Edward Hines of the Lumber Trust to-day resumed his testimony before the Senate Lorimer Investigating Committee. He said he did not know how much money the lumber interests raised for the expenses of a committee in Washington during the tariff legislation of 1909, which was about the time Mr. Lorimer was elected. He admitted, however, that he must have known the amount expended, and that he was asked to contribute to a deficiency. He was willing to make an affidavit that it was not quite $75,000.

Mr. Hines continued his flat contradiction of testimony taken at various stages of the investigation, either here or in Springfield, Ill. He denied the sworn testimony of Herman H. Hettler, President of the Hettler Lumber Company, that Mr. Hines had boasted to him of having "personally" elected Mr. Lorimer to the Senate, and he denied in detail the testimony of Clarence S. Funk, General Manager of the International Harvester Company, sworn to a few days ago before the committee, that under the guise of trying to "refresh" Mr. Funk's memory of their interview in the Union League Club, in which Mr. Funk swore that Mr. Hines had tried to get a contribution of $10,000 to defray the election expenses, Mr. Hines had called upon him and given a version of that interview materially different from the facts as remembered by Mr. Funk.

At the time that second meeting was alleged to have occurred, Mr. Hines swore he was in Washington, not in Chicago, as alleged, and he tried to establish his presence here by showing receipted bills from the New Willard Hotel covering the period in question. Mr. Hines was forced to admit, however, that within the period covered by the bills he did leave Washington for Philadelphia, though he consistently denied having gone to Chicago. He also admitted that his wife's presence at the hotel in his absence explained the continuity of the bills.

"Don't you think you have been rather unfortunate as to the choice of gentlemen with whom you talk, as shown by the testimony here?" Mr. Hines was asked on cross-examination.

"I don't think I have from what has been said here."

Mr. Hines declared that he was "absolutely certain" he was not mistaken about his testimony that former Senator Aldrich stated to him that President Taft was anxious to have Mr. Lorimer elected. Asked about a denial of this from the White House after his testimony at Springfield, Mr. Hines merely said that such a denial had never been "called to his attention."

The White House statement in question, copies of which were reissued to-day, concluded as follows:

"The statement by Mr. Hines that the President was anxious for and was urging the election of Mr. Lorimer is wholly unfounded."

Attorney Marble demanded of Mr. Hines where he got copies of telegrams he put in evidence yesterday regarding the Administration's alleged desire to have Mr. Lorimer elected. They bore the date of May 25, 1909, the day before the election

The witness said his secretary obtained copies of his telegrams from Mr. Lorimer and some from his own notes.

"I remember that those are the telegrams I sent," added Mr. Hines.

Meantime Senator Lorimer left the room hurriedly and returned with two telegrams.

"Here are the original telegrams that Mr. Lorimer received from Mr. Hines," interrupted Attorney Hanecy, for Mr. Lorimer. "One of them is in Mr. Hines's own handwriting."

Senator Lorimer chuckled at the thought of a received telegram being in the sender's own handwriting, and Mr. Hanecy joined in the laugh at Mr. Hines's expense.

$500,000 FOR DYNAMITERS.

Labor Unions Asked to Contribute for Defense of McNamaras.

Special to The New York Times.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., June 30.—Under the action taken by the conference of international labor leaders in this city every member of a labor union having locals in this country is to be requested to contribute 25 cents to the "McNamara fund."

The sum thus raised, which in the aggregate is expected to amount well toward the $500,000 mark, is to be used in the defense of John J. McNamara and James W. McNamara at Los Angeles, where the men await trial on dynamiting charges; in the defense of John J. McNamara, should he be compelled to face trial in Indianapolis on indictments returned against him by the Marion County Grand Jury; for the prosecution of the kidnapping case against W. J. Burns in Indianapolis; to push the indictments said to have been returned here against James Hosaick of Los Angeles, and for the purpose of carrying on any other legal proceedings that may arise from the McNamara affair.

The "McNamara legal defense stamp" also is to be a feature of the campaign for money. The stamps, which will sell for 1 cent each, will serve a double purpose, the union men say, of swelling the defense fund by earning profits and also by keeping constantly in the public eye the case of the men who are imprisoned at Los Angeles.

It is the plan to ask union labor men to affix the McNamara stamp to letters, packages, and the like, the idea being one borrowed from the Red Cross. The design for the stamp will be selected by the officers of the American Federation of Labor, who will issue the stamps to all National and international unions, and to all State, city, and local organizations, with the request that they get busy in making stamp sales. It has been suggested that the stamps bear a likeness of John J. McNamara, with a short descriptive slogan for unionism.

DYNAMITE SUSPECT IN LONDON.

Detective Burns Expected to Bring Back Man Wanted in Los Angeles.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 30.—A man believed to be one of the alleged McNamara dynamite conspirators, is under surveillance in London. Papers are being prepared for his extradition from England to this country. District Attorney John D. Fredericks is in Washington conferring with Secretary of State Knox regarding the case, and it is expected he will join Detective William Burns in London and bring back the suspect.

The first information of the case came from Secretary Knox to Gov. Johnson at Sacramento. Mr. Knox is said to have received his information officially through the British Embassy at Washington.

LONDON, June 30.—Neither Scotland Yard nor the American Embassy here profess knowledge that any one connected with the alleged McNamara dynamite conspiracy is under surveillance here.

It was stated at Scotland Yard to-day that no warrant has been issued and that there has never been the slightest intimation that any one supposed to be connected with the blowing up of The Los Angeles Times Building was in England.

GOT SUGAR SECRETS FROM TRUST'S RIVAL

Official's Kinsman Informed Him When Segal Was 'About Busted' and Ready to Sell.

LETTERS KEPT FOR DEFENSE

Turned Over to ex-President Thomas —Company Paid $10,000,000 for One Plant Worth Only $4,000,000.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—David S. Stetson, a ship broker, of 109 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, who is a cousin of Washington B. Thomas, former President of the American Sugar Refining Company, was a witness to-day before the House committee which is investigating the Sugar Trust. He told in detail of his efforts to get information about Adolph Segal, organizer of the Philadelphia Refining Company, for the American Sugar Refining Company, and several letters that passed between Mr. Stetson and Mr. Thomas disclosed the fact that the trust was after this information long in advance of the purchase of the Pennsylvania Refining Company.

Mr. Segal testified yesterday that he had no recollection of Mr. Stetson, though the latter had told him recently that he had conferred with him in the Manufacturers' Club at Philadelphia.

Notwithstanding Mr. Segal's denial, Mr. Stetson said that Mr. Segal had told him he built the Pennsylvania Refinery to "force it on the Sugar Trust."

"I talked with Mr. Segal at the club at his instance regarding the sale of his Pennsylvania refinery to the American Sugar Refining Company," said Mr. Stetson to-day, and he added that Mr. Segal told him how he happened to sell a Camden refinery to the American Company.

Mr. Stetson said he wrote Mr. Thomas that he thought Mr. Segal was "about busted and would sell," and estimated the cost of the refinery at between $1,800,000 and $2,000,000. Philadelphia friends told him, he said, that the Real Estate Trust Company was on the bonds of the Pennsylvania refinery and was in danger of going to the wall. "This I kept within my own bosom," said the witness, who added that he reported all but this to Mr. Thomas.

The witness said his letters to Mr. Thomas were forwarded to H. O. Havemeyer. He added that he declined Mr. Segal's offer to give him $5,000 if he would sell the Pennsylvania refinery to Mr. Havemeyer.

"I made up my mind then," said Mr. Stetson, "if I couldn't make a good commission I'd block the game. I informed Mr. Thomas of the dangerous financial condition of Mr. Segal, and that if the American Company would hold off they could get the Pennsylvania refinery for a song."

Mr. Stetson said George H. Frazier, a Director of the American Sugar Refining Company, advised him to send the correspondence to Mr. Thomas. Once Mr. Thomas sent an agent from Boston to get from him some correspondence he had failed to forward.

"Did Mr. Frazier ever say to you that if these letters should fall into the Government's hands it might be evidence to establish conspiracy in restraint of trade?" asked Chairman Hardwick.

"Mr. Frazier appeared very much excited, but I don't remember that he said anything like that."

Mr. Stetson said he did not receive a cent for turning over the letters. "Mr. Frazier was not that kind of a man," he said.

The letters he did not regard as incriminating, and he "turned them over to help Mr. Thomas in his defense because he was my kinsman." Mr. Thomas and other Directors of the Sugar Trust are now under indictment for the Pennsylvania Refining transaction.

Mr. Stetson abused George H. Earle, Jr., who testified yesterday that Col. Roosevelt when President refused to prosecute the Sugar Trust. Chairman Hardwick cautioned him against personalities.

"Any man who attacked Theodore Roosevelt as he did yesterday," said Mr. Stetson, "should not go uncriticised. I am a friend of Mr. Roosevelt."

Another witness was Charles Custis Harrison, former Provost of the University of Pennsylvania, whose family owned the second largest sugar refinery in the world before being absorbed by the trust. He is still a stockholder in the trust. He said that the trust paid him and his brothers $10,000,000 for their plant, which had cost about $4,000,000.

At the conclusion of his testimony Mr. Harrison said that he had since regretted selling his inheritance and that of his brothers to the trust. He believed that he found himself in a position where he and his brothers could not give the business to their sons, as their father had done to them, and this forced them into other business and occupations.

"What has been the result of this and other combinations?" he was asked.

"Combinations have relaxed individual effort," replied Mr. Harrison. "They have stifled genius, and we do not have the great men who were produced by individual effort working for themselves."

WHOOPING COUGH COSTS $72.

Cotton Broker Who Reported Ill to Court Found Busy on Exchange.

Morris Abraham, a member of the Cotton Exchange, is $72 out as the result of a speedy recovery from whooping cough. He was sued by the Western Union Telegraph Company some time ago for that amount. When the case was called in the Municipal Court his attorney presented a physician's certificate that he was ill with whooping cough, and his presence in court would be a menace to others.

Joseph P. Shelby, attorney for the telegraph company, was not satisfied with this reason for a continuance. He telephoned to the manager of the company's office on the Exchange, who reported that Mr. Abraham was on the floor lustily offering trades without a thought of danger to the other brokers.

The court entered judgment against him.

Jury to Ask Waldo to Reinstate Welch

The jury which acquitted Policeman James T. Welch of the charge of manslaughter in the first degree on Thursday informed his counsel, Terence J. McManus, yesterday that its members are preparing to petition Commissioner Waldo to reinstate Welch on the police force. The jury found that Welch was acting justifiably in self-defense when a blow from an assailant's club discharged his pistol accidentally, killing Lucy Chabandt.

GORE MOVED BY NIAGARA ROAR

Blind Senator Hearkens to Its Water —Democrats to Elect Next President, He Says.

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 30.—Senator Thomas P. Gore of Oklahoma was vividly impressed to-day with the grandeur of Niagara Falls, although he was not able to see them. On his way to Michigan he stopped here to call upon Norman E. Mack, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and with him went to the Falls in an automobile.

"The only time that I was there before was when a Grand Trunk train stopped at the bridge," said the blind Senator. "I could hear the Falls, but indistinctly, and I wanted to hear the rush of the water and be impressed by its roar. It is awesome, a wonderful thing indeed."

Mr. Gore afterward visited the Roycroft Works, and he asked many questions about Elbert Hubbard's work.

Senator Gore would not discuss the trust prosecutions of the Administration, but he declared that the reciprocity agreement would go through the Senate. Discussing the Presidential contest, he prophesied that the Democrats would win easily, although President Taft is popular and will be renominated. He was unwilling to forecast the Democratic candidate a year and a half hence, on the ground that times change so rapidly that a man in the forefront to-day will be almost forgotten a few months hence.

"I think," he said, "that Gov. Wilson of New Jersey to-day occupies the attention of the American people. He has all the requirements of a strong President. He is not only a scholar, but has made good in handling the affairs of State. If the Democratic National Convention were to be held to-day, I am sure he would be the candidate. As I say, however, a few months from now conditions may change.

"At the Democratic Convention, if it appears that William Jennings Bryan is the only man able to lead the party to victory, I should be for him. But Mr. Bryan has stated that he does not want to run again, and I prefer to take his word."

No Athlete can do himself justice if his feet hurt. Many thousands are using daily, abroad and in this country, Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic powder to be shaken into the shoes. All the prominent Golfers and Tennis Players at Augusta, Pinehurst and Palm Beach got much satisfaction from its use this Spring. IRISH-AMERICAN'S JUNIOR TEAM TITLE

Four Records Broken at National Track and Field Games in Pittsburg.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, June 30.—Athletes of the Irish-American A. C. of New York duplicated their 1910 victory here to-day in the junior National track and field championships of the Amateur Athletic Union by vanquishing the pick of the competitive forces of the United States.

The point total of the Winged Fist team was 37. Their nearest rivals, the New York A. C., were second with 27, with the Boston A. A. third, with 23. The Chicago A. A. tallied 20, while the Pastime A. C. of New York, and the Pittsburg A. A. tied at 11 each. The other points were scattered.

Forbes Field, the scene of the contests, presented a gala appearance, being splendidly decorated in honor of the initial contests for titles in the athletic line which have fallen to Pittsburg. An enormous crowd put in an appearance to do honor to the brawn and speed gathered from East, West, North, and South.

For junior events the various contests developed some high-class work and bespoke some record-breaking competitions when the kingpins get together to-morrow for the senior contests.

Four junior records were broken. The first to be smashed was the running high jump, in which Oliver Johnstone, Boston A. A., cleared the really creditable height of 6 feet 6-10 of an inch, displacing the best previous mark of 5-11, made by Egon Erickson at Seattle in 1909. Later on A. M. Mucks of the Chicago A. A. took a fall out of the discus record by scaling the missile 123 feet 5 inches, as against the former mark of 122 feet 9 inches, held by B. Bantz, Seattle.

Gayle A. Dull, the former University of Michigan runner, but now with the Pittsburg A. A., gave Father Time something to do in the rearrangement of his books by doing 26:08 4-5, and beating Mike Driscoll's best time of 26:23 2-5, made in 1908. In the pole vault S. B. Wagoner, who got his athletic tuition at Yale, cleared the great height of 12 feet 5 64-100 inches, being the fourth to break record. The junior records in the 100 yards and the quarter-mile were equaled.

The day was conducive to the making of good performances, and crack-a-jack work began with the "hundred," won by the New England sprinting champion, H. P. Drew, a colored lad, who scampered away with the event from A. T. Meyer, a much improved lad, from the Irish-American's of New York. The latter showed his worth later in the "two twenty" by again scoring second place to F. P. O'Hara, a former Exeter lad, who is now aligned with the Boston A. A.

The third sprint to go to the New England division was the quarter, when W. C. Prout galloped off with that event from such good ones as Joe Dolan, Pastime A. C., New York, and Lester Wood, the Wesleyan lad who has thrown his fortunes with the New York A. C.

The Irish-American A. C. made almost a clean sweep of those essentially Celtic competitions, the hop, step and jump and the "fifty-six." In the latter they gained all three places, and finished one, two in the other.

One of the most popular wins of the series was scored by I. C. Bowne, a Mamaroneck, N. Y., lad, running in the colors of the Winged Foot. Frail looking and, apparently, frightened at the supposed prowess of the men in the field, he was not given a look-in by the uninitiated before the race started. But after the field had traveled half a mile he had every one except the most offensive partisans rooting for him.

When he got ready to cut loose he did it with a vengeance and electrified the onlookers with his tremendous sprint, which proved a revelation to some of his opponents, whom he left as though they were tired, finally winning in comfortable fashion in the fine time of 4:27.

Frank Riley, the Captain of the Irish-American A. C., ran one of his good races to-day and took the measure of a slashing good field. Riley came home in the capital time of 1:56 4-5, quite the best performance he has done since his five yards worse than 1:52 4-5, credited to Lungha, several years ago in the Canadian championships, but which is generally discredited.

Little Peter Terhune, a Barringer schoolboy from Newark, N. J., who could just about peer over the tops of the hurdles in the 120-yard race, caught the judge's eye in that event, doing 16 1-5 seconds, the best he has ever done in competition. Incidentally he turned the tables on his mate, Gus Braun, who beat him in the metropolitan juniors last week. Braun got third in this event, and second in the low hurdles.

Ed Hines of the Pastimes proved the dark horse in the hammer, and got it out the fine distance of 149 feet 1 inch. Marden, the Dartmouth lad, who won the Metropolitan 12-pound junior, was second. All of the men in this event improved on their previous work.

Wagoner, formerly of Yale, but now representing the Pittsburg A. A., corraled the pole vault, with 12 feet 5 64-100 inches. He beat among others Gordon Dukes, New York A. C., and Lambert of St. Louis, each of whom did 12 feet.

In the shot put Reich of the Irish-Americans put it over on Klages, New York A. C., and tallied first honors, which were won by him last week in the Metropolitan junior championship contests.

A glance over the winners shows that the Irish-Americans got 4 firsts; the Boston A. A., 4; Chicago A. A., 3; New York A. C., 2; Pittsburg A. A., 2; Pastime A. A., 1, and South Boston A. C., 1. The summary:

A large fleet of motor boats from the Colonial Yacht Club, headed by Commodore Charles M. Hilliker's flagship Comfort, will leave the clubhouse at 138th Street and Hudson River to-day for the annual cruise on Long Island Sound. This popular club is enjoying one of the most successful seasons of its career. Racing and cruising will be the order each alternate week. The handsome prizes displayed in the clubhouse for different races indicate that the Regatta Committee is very enthusiastically supported.

In the annual race around Manhattan Island, Capt. C. F. Stone's Scotland won first prize, while second prize was awarded to the Virginia, owned by Capt. H. M. Betts. Several large boats have been added to the fleet this year, and the membership has increased so rapidly that it has been necessary to form a waiting list. The officers of the club are as follows:

Commodore—Charles M. Hilliker; Vice Commodore—James A. Donegan; Rear Commodore—Dr. N. J. Baker; Fleet Captain—Franklin P. Pratt; Board of Directors—R. E. Weldon, Chairman; Frank Totten, Fred Gerst, C. S. Welch, C. P. Holland, H. J. Russell, C. F. Stone, Dr. M. J. Brasill, J. B. Bashore, Chairman Regatta Committee.

MANHASSET BAY CUP RACE.

July 10, 11, and 12 Set Apart for Holding of Challenge Event.

What promises to be the most interesting series of races yet sailed for the Manhasset Bay Challenge Cup will be those scheduled for July 10, 11, and 12. While seven clubs have challenged for the trophy, it is unlikely that more than six will be represented. The entries so far are the Amoret of the Corinthian Yacht Club of Marblehead, the Timandra of the Eastern Yacht Club, the Windward of the Larchmont Yacht Club, the Cara Mia, present holder of the cup, of the American Yacht Club, and the Corinthian of the Seawanhaka-Corinthian Yacht Club. The defender is the American Yacht Club.

The races of the match will be alternately to windward or leeward and return and triangular, beginning with the former on July 10. Additional races necessary to determine the winner of the match will be sailed alternately as above. The windward and leeward races will be sailed twice over, a distance of sixteen miles.

The races will be sailed without time allowance and under the racing rules of the Yacht Racing Association of Long Island Sound of 1911, except as specially provided. The helmsman must be an amateur, and a member in good standing of the club whose yacht he sails. Charles Lane Poor is the representative of the American Yacht Club, and Aemilius Jarvis of the Seawanhaka-Corinthian Yacht Club on board the committee boat, and James D. Sparkman of the New York Yacht Club as referee or umpire.

Wisconsin Re-engages Coach Vail.

MADISON, Wis., June 30.—The regents of the University of Wisconsin have voted to re-engage Coach Vail of the State University crew for another year as recognition of the manner in which he fought for a place in the Poughkeepsie regatta last week. One notable action of the coach was his ordering the star oarsman out of the crew at a time when his services seemed invaluable, because of a violation of the training rules against smoking.

Miss Hotchkiss Tennis Victor.

PITTSBURG, June 30.—Miss Hazel Hotchkiss of Berkeley, National tennis champion, to-day defeated Miss Florence Sutton of California in the tournament of the Pittsburg Field Club. The score was 6—1, 6—4. To-morrow Miss Hotchkiss and Miss Jane Craven will play the challenge round in women's singles. The final round in the mixed doubles and women's doubles will also be decided to-morrow. Miss Hotchkiss and Percy D. Siverd of this city, Pennsylvania champion, will oppose Miss Sutton and the Rev. N. J. Rendall, while in the women's doubles Miss Hotchkiss and Miss Elizabeth Bunce of New York, indoor champion will play Miss Bessie Garrison and Mrs. T. S. Jacques.

ON THE TENNIS COURTS.

Using his variations of speed with good effect Gustave F. Touchard won the singles section of the Long Island lawn tennis championship tournament yesterday on the courts of the Kings County Club, Brooklyn, and becomes the challenger of William B. Cragin, Jr., for the title and trophy. In his semi-final match Touchard defeated M. Johnson by the score of 8—6, 6—1. In this contest Johnson hit hard in the opening set and cut the lines with his shots so that Touchard was tricked out of many of the games. At 5—all Touchard steadied and won at 8—6, taking the next set at 6—1. Samuel A. Westfall created a surprise in the other semi-final by defeating Benjamin M. Phillips by the score of 6—2, 6—2. Westfall came up to the net quickly and killed all of Phillips's drives in splendid fashion. The summary:

Men's Singles.—Semi-Final Round—S. A. Westfall defeated B. M. Phillips, 6—2, 6—2; G. F. Touchard defeated M. Johnson, 8—6, 6—1.

Final Round—Touchard defeated Westfall, 6—4, 6—4, 6—1.

RECOVERS ON LADING BILL.

Verdict Against Delaware & Hudson, Which Issued Bill Without Shipment.

A verdict of approximately $91,000 was awarded by a jury in the Supreme Court yesterday before Justice Cohalan to Elizabeth H. Denike against the Delaware & Hudson Company growing out of fradulent bills of lading on which money was obtained by the Albany commission house of Durant & Elmore, which failed two years ago.

Durant & Elmore had been established in Albany as grain merchants for more than a century, and had credit which enabled them to obtain without question large sums on their drafts secured by bills of lading, purporting to represent shipments of grain. The real plaintiffs in the case are Otto Keusch, a member of the Produce Exchange, who accepted the Durant & Elmore imaginary shipments on the strength of the railroad bills of lading issued by their regular Albany agent, and the Corn Exchange Bank which accepted the paper on loans made to Keusch. The plaintiff of record is the assignee of these claims.

The case decided is only one of a number of claims against the railroad on similar transactions. At the time of the Durant & Elmore failure it was discovered that large numbers of bills of lading had been used by the firm, which either represented shipments which had been diverted to other consignees and delivered to them, or had not been made.

WHITE AND TAYLOR IN FINAL GOLF MATCH

Oakland and Home Club Players Best in Ardsley's Tournament.

Gardiner W. White of Oakland and Wyatt W. Taylor, representing the home club, survived the match rounds in the invitation golf tournament at the Ardsley Club yesterday. As a result, they will be opponents in the thirty-six-hole final to-day.

White won two matches easily, defeating S. Prescott of Ardsley in the morning, 6 up and 5 to play, and W. V. Swords, Jr., an Oakland clubmate, by a 7-and-6 margin after luncheon. Taylor had an almost equally "soft" road, disposing of C. R. Gillett of Wykagyl by 7 up and 5 to play in the second round and W. F. Morgan, Jr., of Baltusrol by a 5-and-3 margin later on.

A dispute marred the semi-final round match in the first beaten eight between Charles Rowe of Dunwoodie and H. A. Steiner of Inwood. While playing the seventeenth hole, where Rowe stood dormie, Steiner's ball was accidentally kicked by his own caddie. In the argument that ensued Rowe is quoted as having said to Steiner, "I'll give you the hole, anyway." After that Steiner claims he played the hole carelessly and did not try to win it. Assuming that he had won the hole, Steiner went on and won the home hole, squaring the match. Extra holes were then played, and Steiner finally won the twenty-first green. It has been asserted that when Steiner's caddie kicked the ball it cost the player a stroke; also that Steiner failed to win the hole with that penalty imposed. The committee reserved its decision last night.

A hard-fought match resulted from the meeting of James D. Foot of Apawamis and Z. T. Miller of Dunwoodie in the semi-final round of the second sixteen. They finished all square, both getting a 79. On the extra hole Foot won. The summary:

GOLF STARS OFF THEIR GAME.

Newcomers in Sport to Play for Hudson River Championship To-day.

Titleholders past and present were brushed aside in the semi-final round of the Hudson River Golf Association championship tournament at the Rockland Country Club yesterday. As a result S. D. Connelly, the seventeen-year-old sensation, representing the home club, and H. B. Wood of the Columbia Country Club, will fight it out for the title at thirty-six holes to-day.

Tiffany, the Powleton golfer who has won this championship on five different occasions ran up against a snag in Wood, who in his own deliberate way played par golf. The end came rather unexpectedly at the sixteenth hole, where Wood stood 2 up. Their second shots left them just off the edge of the green, Tiffany being away. He played his chip shot close up and seemed reasonably certain of a 4, but it availed nothing, for Wood ran his long one down for a 3, which won the match by 3 up and 2 to play.

In the other half of the semi-final round Connelly met Archie Reid, the titleholder. Although not at his best, Reid might have won had his opponent not laid him three stymies throughout the match. As it was Connelly only beat him by one up. The summary:

First Sixteen.—Second Round—S. D. Connelly, Rockland, beat T. H. Crane, Saegkill, 7 up and 5 to play; Archie M. Reid, Saegkill, beat E. M. Carroll, Rockland, 4 up and 3 to play; Gilman P. SIMPSON'S OPEN TITLE.

Tom McNamara Defeated In Final Round of Western Golf.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., June 30.—Robert Simpson of Kenosha, Wis., winner of the Western open golf championship at the Hinsdale Club, Chicago, in 1907, is again the possessor of the title. This afternoon, under a hot sun and on a course faster than at any previous time this week, he defeated Thomas McNamara of Boston, two up and one to play.

Despite the sweltering heat, a large gallery followed the contestants over the Kent Country Club course and witnessed a match which was anybody's until the twenty-eighth hole was played. Simpson won because he played the better and steadier golf. Time and again he outdrove the Boston man, and three times during the afternoon McNamara missed short putts which would have given him an equal number of holes.

Simpson was two up when the thirty-fourth hole was completed. Then on his drive, he shied to the rough and recovered, while McNamara was sharp away on his first and pulled his second stroke badly, overruning the hole on his third. It was halved in five, giving Simpson the title.

The afternoon half of the match was not quite as interesting as the morning play, but it was far from dull. McNamara was never able to take the lead, although he twice evened up matters.

The afternoon round started with Simpson one up. He increased his lead on the nineteenth, which he won, four to five. McNamara won the twentieth, but the twenty-first, twenty-second and twenty-third were halved. McNamara evened the match on the twenty-fifth, winning it three to four. The Kenosha man took the next hole with a good three, the twenty-sixth was halved, and on the twenty-seventh McNamara was on equal terms again, holing with three shots to the champion's four. Simpson drew ahead again on the twenty-eighth and they halved the twenty-ninth. On the thirtieth hole Simpson duplicated his drive of the morning round and won it four to five. He also took the thirty-first, three to four, while the next was halved in four. The thirty-third was the last hole McNamara won, driving splendidly and holing in four, while Simpson took five. The next two were halved, giving Simpson the match.

SAILOR BURKE WINS WITH KNOCKOUT BLOW

Ted Nelson of Australia Takes the Count in Third Round at Twentieth Century A. C.

After leading in the first two rounds on points, Ted Nelson of Australia ran into the famous punch of Sailor Burke and was knocked out in the third round of the scheduled ten-round bout at the Twentieth Century A. C. last night.

The third session had just started, and from the showing of Nelson, who was doing by far the better work, the blow came as a surprise. After starting at a fast clip, Burke got close to his Australian opponent and beat his body with short-arm blows from both hands, and when the chance for which he was playing came he was quick to seize it, and a short left to the stomach, quickly followed with a stiff right to the point of the jaw, put Nelson down and out. After the deciding round was recorded Nelson gained his feet, and, although helpless, tried to continue, and while White was still holding him the Sailor slipped one over Charlie's shoulder to make sure of his victory, and then danced to his corner.

Burke had evidently planned for a knockout, which was evident by the way in which he trained out of his corner in both the first and second rounds. As the bell sounded for the start she sailor rushed to a clinch, but Ted was first to land, sending a straight left to the face and followed with a right swing which went wild of its mark. Nelson repeated with a straight right to the jaw, which sent Burke to the floor, but only for a few seconds, and the sailor was back after his man with a vengeance. Both men fought hard and were playing for the same blows, a hard right, and before many more were exchanged a second fall was scored when Nelson was downed in his own corner from a straight left to the jaw. When the two clinched Burke, who was several pounds heavier, used his weight and pounded the Australian's body, which was the first evidence of his victory. As the bell sounded for the close of the round Nelson landed a hard left jab on Burke's face. The round slightly favored Nelson on points.

Burke started the hostilities in the second session by rushing clear over to Nelson's corner as the bell rang, but the latter met him with a left straight to the jaw. Burke went to a clinch and the pair wrestled for a time before breaking. Nelson scored a hard right hook short to the wind, and followed it with a left for the jaw. Both men were aroused to a high pitch, and in a fast mixup exchanged a volley of good blows to the body, but the bulk of the work was done by Burke, who was superior at this style of attack.

After breaking away Nelson did some fast work, and scored a left hook on the ribs, which he repeated as they broke. The Australian missed his best chance of the bout when Burke crouched low and left a fine opening for a right to the jaw. Nelson missed by a large margin. The work of Nelson in this period entitled him to the point honors.

Neither man showed any real signs of punishment as the third round opened, and both were apparently in fine shape, but it was at this stage that the Sailor showed his cunning. He fought much cleaner than on the occasion of their last meeting of a few weeks ago, and consequently did not give his enemies much chance to hiss him.

Burke opened the third by walking slowly to the centre, where he met Nelson, and in a clash at close range pounded Nelson's body with both hands. Nelson straightened the Sailor up with a stiff left jab, which he repeated before Burke could get his bearings. The Australian sent a hard right to the jaw and then steadied and rocked the tar with a short right hook. After getting away Burke drew Nelson, who was a bit careless in his attack, close, and after scoring the left, which he quickly followed with the right to the jaw, ended the fray then and there.

DE PALMA TO RACE BURMAN.

Auto Pilot Cancels Engagements to Drive at Brighton Beach.

Ralph De Palma, who intended to race in the West, has canceled his engagement in order to compete at the Brighton Beach Motordrome meet, July 3 and 4. De Palma will pit his 50 horsepower Simplex in the free-for-all open race in which are entered Bob Burman, Patchske, Knipper, Tetzlaff and other drivers. The other cars entered in the free-for-all are the Blitzen Benz, the 110 horsepower Benz which Knipper will pilot, the Jenatzy Mercedes, which either Tetzlaff or Patchske will drive; the National car which holds a beach world's record, the Simplex to be driven by Ormsby, a Mercedes entered by N. F. Du Cloene, an Opel which was imported specially for this event by the Opel Import Company, the Pope-Hummer which Louis Disbrow will drive, and Ralph Beardsley's Simplex.

The handicaps have over fifteen entries, while every event on the entry blank is filled excepting the amateur event. More than enough entries were received for the amateur race, but several of the entrants could not qualify according to the A. A. A. rules, so that the event was not placed on the final cars. One amateur who has the reputation of being the highest salaried driver of this class in the world filled a blank for this event.

Bob Burman shipped his string of racing cars from Grand Rapids to New York yesterday. His imported Blitzen Benz and his Knox are being groomed for the fray. Burman will pilot his Benz in the free-for-all and in the record trials, and his Knox entry in the class for cars of 600 inches and less in displacement, with a minimum weight of 2,100 pounds. Among the drivers who are nominated to drive at the meet are De Palma, Burman, Disbrow, Knipper, Tetzlaff, Patchske, Robinson, Ormsby Hughes, Beardsley, Zengle, Tower, Du Cloene, Rost, Anderson, Frye Juhasz, Fisher, Sheets, Ferguson, Gray, Ritcher, Tate, Shanahan and Lane.

Secretary Forsdick of the Automobile Club of America will weigh in cars at the clubhouse to-day and Saturday. Upon being weighed the entrants will receive certificates which will entitle them to enter.

Boxing Shows To-night.

Battling Mantell, sparring partner of Knockout Brown, and Al Ketchel, the Bridgeport boy, who has shown up so well in recent bouts in New York, will be the headliners of to-night's show at the Fairmont A. C. In another ten-round bout Joe Farmer will exchange punches with Kid Rose. Two six-round bouts, Pat Sheppard versus Jack Smith and Joe Bell versus Harlem Tommy Hopkins, will precede the longer events.

The lowly Boston Rustlers can dodge a victory more often than any other team in big league society, not excepting the St. Louis Browns, but there are days when victory refuses to be dodged even by the Rustlers. Yesterday was one of those joyous days for the tail-enders, and they traveled hand in hand with victory practically all the way during their two hours' session with the league leaders at the Polo Grounds. The Tenneyites managed to stay on even terms with the McGraw boys for the first two innings, and then they forged so far ahead that the Polo Grounders saw nothing but their heels for the remainder of the battle. The final count was 7 to 4.

Undue familiarity with the fork arm slants of George Wiltse put the Rustlers on easy street early in the battle. They had the habit of straightening Wiltse's benders into two-base hits with painful regularity when George put 'em over, and a tendency to look over the bad ones when the slender southpaw pitched 'em outside the corners. Four doubles, a brace of singles and three gifts were crowded into the first three innings, and the combination netted a half dozen runs. Wiltse lasted another inning and got away with less damage, but he was edged out of the landscape in the Giants' half of the fourth to make room for a pinch hitter. Drucke and Ames pitched the remainder of the distance, each being crowded out, as was Wiltse, to allow a pinch hitter to perform.

Meanwhile Hub Perdue kept the Giants at a respectable distance from the lead, which his mates had chalked up in the early innings. He was reached for as many hits as the trio of New York boxmen, but they were neither as hard nor as timely and he never appeared wavering after the first inning. It was a home run splash by Red Murray with two down in New York's half of the first inning and Snodgrass on second base that gave the Giants a look-in at any stage of the proceedings.

Manager McGraw used up his full force of pinch hitters to stall off the trimming, but Perdue refused to cave. After the Rustlers had finished their eventful third inning the battle had assumed an aspect where hits and not shut-out pitching could alone save the day, and each time any of the pitchers had a chance to bat the derrick gently lifted that pitcher from the scene.

Mike Donlin was the first to essay the role of Mr. Pinch, and the fans gave Sir Michael another rousing reception as he waddled to the plate, with his cap on his ear, fire in his eye, and two bats dangling over his shoulder. Mike made a noble effort to crowd himself into the hit column, but Hoch Kaiser in centre field blocked the entrance and Mike was soon headed for the clubhouse. Beals Becker got the assignment to start a rally in the seventh when Drucke's turn arrived, and Beals gave an imitation of Mike by clouting to Kaiser and then drifting from the scene. Otey Crandall pushed Ames into the discard in the ninth, and Otey did just what Ames would probably have done. That's it, three strikes.

Even Arlie Latham figured in the crash. Arlie did not get a chance to get into the battle, but he made so much noise on the side lines that Fred Tenney decided it was time to put a muffler on Arlie's chin. At the close of the seventh inning, when the Rustlers were coming in from the field, Tenney passed Latham while the latter was on his way from the coaching line to the New York bench. Tenney's verbal biff was not loud enough to echo over the concrete stands, but it proved strong enough to ruffle Arlie's dignity and separate the Latham goat from its owner. Latham was a badly upset person when he crawled under the bench murmuring something about being no older than Tenney. Tenney rested on his oars while Arlie warbled loudly at the Boston manager.

The visitors got busy in the opening inning and pushed a pair of counters across. Sweeney waited for a pass and moved along to second while Tenney was beating out a bunt. Herzog hit into a double play, Bridwell to Doyle to Merkle, and Sweeney pushed along to third. Miller got Wiltse's second pass and worked a successful double steal with Sweeney, who beat Bridwell's return to the plate, Ingerton doubled into right field and Miller registered.

The Giants got the two runs back in their half. After Devore and Doyle had gone out in order, Snodgrass hit past third base for two bases, and Murray followed with a drive into the new right field stand for a home run. Merkle followed with another hit, but was forced at second when Bridwell hit to Herzog.

Kaiser hit into left field for two bases in Boston's half of the second, and reached third on an infield out, but was stranded. Then the Giants went down easy, and the Rustlers packed the game away. Tenney started the fireworks with a hot drive past third base for two cushions, and Herzog sacrificed. Miller scored Tenney with a sizzler past second, and moved up on Ingerton's out, Wiltse to Merkle. Steinfeldt accepted Wiltse's third gift, and Kling followed with a wallop over Devore's head for two bases, scoring Miller and Steinfeldt. Kaiser lofted to right field, and the ball spattered out of Murray's fingers while Kling journeyed across. Kaiser got two bases on the error, but Perdue ended the inning with a drive to Wiltse.

The Rustlers threatened to score again in the fourth, when two passes by Drucke were followed by Kling's sacrifice, but Kaiser and Perdue were easy. The Giants scored in the fifth on Doyle's single and steal, Perdue's poor throw to second, and a single by Snodgrass. Tenney scored Boston's last run in the sixth. He reached first base on a fielder's choice, following Sweeney's single, and finished the distance on Herzog's single, a fielder's choice, and a wild pitch. Devore scored New York's last run in the seventh on his single and steal and Snodgrass's third hit.

The members of the Waseda University team of Tokio were the guests of the New York management at yesterday's game. The full squad, numbering about a dozen Japs, arrived in the fifth inning. They occupied seats in the new stand just behind third base, and took great interest in the game. The Japs play the Manhattan College team at Lenox Oval this afternoon.

WATCHING THE GIANTS SLIP.

About 4,000 fans saw the Rustlers win.

The rear section of the concrete stands continues to hold its popularity.

In spite of the small crowd and the large stands there was considerable crowding—in those narrow chairs.

If Mike Donlin ever gets a chance to bat with the bases full and two or three runs needed, the noise will wake up Brooklyn. Mike gets about the limit of applause now when he saunters to the plate with the sacks empty and the Giants hopelessly in the rear.

Seven ex-Cubs and two ex-Giants made up the nine which defeated McGraw's team yesterday. Kling, Steinfeldt, Kaiser, Ingerton, Miller, Sweeney, and Perdue were formerly bossed by Frank Chance, and the other two, Tenney and Herzog, formerly wore Giant livery.

Devore's single to left field in the seventh brought Josh more applause than a home run would gain him ordinarily. He has slumped badly in hitting. That was his first hit of the present series.

The visitors monopolized the fancy fielding stunts. Tenney and Sweeney made spectacular one-hand stops, and Kaiser a great running catch.

Johnny Kling wore the smile that won't erase after cracking out the double which really won the game in the fourth inning. Johnny's only consolation in baseball these days is beating his old enemies, the Giants, or Frank Chance's team.

Kling may have gone back considerably, but that old whip is still to be reckoned with, as Snodgrass learned when he tried to steal third in the fifth inning.

Jeffries Back from Europe.

James J. Jeffries, former heavyweight champion pugilist of the world, arrived in New York yesterday on the Mauretania after a visit of several weeks in Europe. Mrs. Jeffries accompanied the ex-champion. No demonstration of any kind marked his arrival and it was learned that he had made himself very inconspicuous while on shipboard. He looked well and strong and stated to the newspaper men who interviewed him that he intended going first to his home in Los Angeles, after which he would go to Alaska on a hunting expedition. No questions were asked concerning his opinion of Johnson or about his plans for spending the anniversary of that memorable day at Reno.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, June 30.—Things in general didn't look any too bright for the Red Sox in the game against the Yankees this afternoon until after the middle of the game, when the locals bunched a few hits and helped greatly by errors succeeded in nosing out a victory by a score of 7 to 6.

It was a regular marching day for the pitchers, three being used by both sides. Of those mostly used up Eddie Karger could be called the worst. He had pitched one inning, and was up to bat when he was struck in the wrist by one of Caldwell's smoky ones. Eddie Cicotte, who succeeded him, pitched gilt-edged ball the remainder of the game. Moser started the game for Boston, but it did not take long to put him up in the air. Daniels sent one screaming down the third base line, and then Donovan decided to bench the kid.

While the opening inning was marked by ragged playing by the Red Sox, they made up for it later. Riggert, who was sent in to relieve Lewis, did not have much of a chance to show his goods, as he was struck on the head by one of Caldwell's speedy ones. Engle took his place and performed creditably. Thoney, who batted for Moser when he was bericked, made good with a single. Hooper got on his second time up, and Gardner broke the ice by sending out a long one to centre, scoring Myers and Williams, who had got on that fatal third.

Cicotte seemed to have it on Chase and Knight, and he wafted them to the dugout. This seemed to have a bad effect on the other members of the team, and Cicotte had little trouble in re-establishing himself with President Taylor.

Boston went trailing along with two runs in the wake of New York's five until the fourth inning, when Steve Yerkes dispelled the gloom hereabout by rapping out a homer which scored Gardner, who had singled to centre.

Quinn went in in the sixth inning, and the shift proved unwise. Myers, who had already performed like a veteran, hit a pop fly to Gardner. Williams drew a pass. Cicotte looked on while Quinn burned three delusive ones over on him. It was at this juncture that Hooper banged one to Hartzell, and as his handling was imperfect it raised the mischief. Williams stepped along toward the home plate with the tieing run. On Gardner's hit Hooper scored, placing the home team in the lead for a little while any way. Previous to this round of pleasure Cicotte won the applause of the fans by fanning Chase and Knight. Earl Gardner filed to Speaker for the third out of that illy started session.

There was general uneasiness in the eighth when New York tied the score again. It did not matter much as Boston had their eyes peeled for the game, and were working like trojans. Vaughan went in to finish the game for the Yankees. The first thing he did was to pass Myers. Williams advanced the slim one, and Cicotte went out to Chase. Hooper and Gardner both took excellent exception to Vaughan's delivery, the former's bingle virtually winning the game, scoring Myers. Boston closed their session with Speaker going out on a grounder, Vaughan rendering the assist.

Only twenty-three men went to bat for Cleveland in the first seven innings. Harkness fanned six in three innings, and allowed but one hit in three innings, striking out the side in the ninth. Score:

BASEBALL NOTES.

Johnny Evers has been a daily attendant at recent games of the White Sox in Chicago, and he stated a few days ago that he would be in the game by the time the Cubs start on their Eastern tour next Wednesday.

The report circulated a few days ago that Detroit was to be replaced by some other city brought the following letter from President Ban Johnson to a Detroit paper: "In the last few days wide circulation has been given an absurd story that floated out of St. Louis in regard to the transfer of the Detroit Club. Nothing could be more absurd and I do not believe any sensible baseball writer would give it credence. Detroit is the only original city left in our circuit and we take pride in its growth and fame as a baseball city. We have never had any grounds for complaint as to patronage and it is a matter that has not been discussed by American League club owners. Only a few days ago Mr. Yawkey was in Chicago and he told me of his plans for the building of a new ball park in Detroit this Fall. From this you may gather that we have no thought of the transfer of your club to some other city. The peace agreement established our territory and there can be no change in the circuits of the American and National League without common consent. Detroit's patrons of the game have been loyal to the club and the American League. We are proud to have such a city in our circuit."

SYDENHAM HOSPITAL CLOSES ITS DOORS

May Be Rebuilt to Comply with Orders of the State Board and Fire Department.

KUNITZER ROW RECALLED

Directors Deny That Expulsion of Chief Physician from Medical Society Affected the Institution.

Following the recent expulsion by the New York County Medical Society of Dr. Robert Kunitzer, chief physician of Sydenham Hospital, on charges of helping Dr. Louis Anton Ewald falsify medical records there, and the resignation of Dr. Kunitzer from the directorate of the hospital upon recommendation of the State Board of Charities, closed the doors of all its nine buildings on 116th Street, between First and Second Avenues, yesterday, as THE TIMES announced it would do. The last patient had been sent home two days ago, and its eight internes and thirty-two nurses were notified some days ago that their services would no longer be required.

Despite the close sequence of the hospital's closing upon the trouble attending Dr. Kunitzer's trial and the subsequent investigation of the hospital by the State Board of Charities, the Board of Directors declared yesterday that there was no causal relation between those troubles and the closing of the institution. The place was closed, they said, "temporarily until further order of the board," until suitable alterations could be made or the hospital buildings be erected anew, in order to comply with the State Board of Charities' orders concerning adequate air space and the orders of the Building Department concerning fire escapes, openings to the roof, and the like.

The Board of Directors itself, however, is but a shadow of the former board that guided the affairs of the hospital before the charges were brought against its chief physician and administrator. Most of the old board resigned when the controversy concerning him was at its height. One of these was Isaac Guggenheim, who had been one of the most liberal patrons of the hospital, and who was known to be a warm friend of Dr. Kunitzer.

Just how long the hospital will remain closed the Directors were unwilling yesterday to state. The internes and nurses, however, for the most part, declared outright that they were not counting on its reopening at all, and that they had procured or would procure places at other hospitals.

Joseph Michael, one of the Directors, denied that the hospital's revenues had fallen off after the Kunitzer trouble to $2,000 a week, as against a weekly expenditures of $4,000. He said those figures were taken only for the month of May, when the city had withheld its contribution to the hospital. That contribution, he added, was subsequently granted. The city had paid from $600 to $1,000 a month for charity patients at the hospital.

Mr. Michael said it could not be foretold whether the hospital would reopen under the old or new management, or whether it would be merely altered or rebuilt. There were several large contributors, he said, who seemed ready to give substantial funds if the old buildings were torn down and a new hospital building put up. Among these, he intimated, was Isaac Guggenheim; but Mr. Michael added that Mr. Guggenheim's gift was presumed to be contingent upon the retention of Dr. Kunitzer at the hospital.

Mr. Michael added that the hospital was sure to be reopened at some time, in view of the heavy demand for treatment made by the Italian and Jewish residents of the neighborhood. The present site and property, he said, is worth at least $40,000, and with the contributions already in sight it ought to be no difficult matter to erect a new hospital building.

Sydenham Hospital was incorporated in 1892. At the time of its closing it had 100 beds, which were ordered reduced to seventy by the State Board of Charities. The buildings of the institution include the hospital proper, the dispensary, and the post-graduate hospital and nurses' school. The property extends 170 feet on 116th Street and has a depth of 100 feet. Its present Directors are Joseph P. Day, Walter J. Moore, A. Michael, Joseph Michael, W. H. Fletcher, Judge Otto Rosalsky, Gustav Kraus, Rudolph Alexander, D. Zoglin, Vito Contessa, Sol Wronker, Sam I. Frankenstein, S. Bauman, and Sanford Simons.

MOTHER SEEKS TAFT'S AID.

Wants Inquiry Into Disappearance of Her Soldier Boy in the West.

Mrs. Mary Kramer of 9 Pitt Street will write to President Taft to-day asking him to order an inquiry to determine what has become of her son Louis, of Company M, Second United States Infantry, who has been missing from his regiment, now on duty in Montana, since October last. Mrs. Kramer has received a letter from First Lieut. Homer W. Preston saying that a board of officers which investigated the disappearance of her son is of the opinion that he was murdered and his body hidden. Lieut. Frederick V. S. Chamberlain, also of the Second Infantry, has written similar information to a New York friend of the missing soldier.

Kramer was 23 years old and had been in the army several years. He was one of the most accomplished musicians in the Second Infantry Band. His effects, including over $300 in cash, were received yesterday by his mother.

GAS COMPANY EXPLAINS.

Given Reasons for New Contract with Standard Oil at Higher Rate.

In reference to the fact alluded to in some of the morning papers that in November, 1905, the Consolidated Gas Company canceled an unexpired oil contract with the Standard Oil Company and made a new contract at a higher rate, it was stated at the office of the gas company that this matter was exhaustively reviewed in the 80-cent gas case before the court, and the uncontradicted testimony of the company's experts was to the effect that in order to comply with the requirements of the statute of 1905, which established twenty-two candle power as the standard of illumination, and prescribed a daily test with a penalty of $1,000 for every violation of the law, a higher grade oil had to be used during the Winter months than that covered by the unexpired contract. The engineers testified that owing to the low temperature during the Winter months the gas manufactured with the lower grade of oil would not retain the illuminants so as to enable the company to deliver at the consumers' burners gas of the required illuminating power.

It was also shown by the testimony in the case referred to that the higher price paid for the higher grade oil was offset by its greater efficiency, and the court found:

> The testimony is practically undisputed that a higher gravity oil is more efficient in carrying illuminants in cold weather than oil of a lower grade. It would appear further that, from the standpoint of economy, the greater efficiency of the higher grade oil more than offsets the difference in its cost per gallon.

Respecting the price, it was further found by the court that:

> There is no satisfactory evidence that oil of the grade used by complainant could be delivered by any independent operator at a price substantially less than the complainant now pays; nor, making due allowance for varying local conditions and differences in grade, is there any satisfactory evidence that the price paid by complainant is on the whole excessive, as compared with that paid by various other companies, to which reference was made.

DIX VETOES 16 BILLS.

Thinks Imprisonment for Illegal Liquor Selling Has Wholesome Effect.

ALBANY, June 30.—Sixteen bills were vetoed by Gov. Dix to-day, among them two proposed liquor tax law amendments. The first changed the statutes so that conviction of illegal sale of liquor would be punishable either by a fine of not less than $300, or imprisonment for not more than six motnhs or both such fine or imprisonment. At present there is a fine of not less than $200 nor more than $1,200 and imprisonment for not less than thirty days nor more than one year.

The Governor says the salutary effect on a person violating the law and knowing he will be imprisoned is most wholesome.

The second bill provided that persons charged with violating the law could be tried at Courts of Special Sessions in New York, but only after indictment by the Grand Jury.

Other bills vetoed provided that Spanish and Philippine war veterans should be subject to the same privileges as civil war veterans to recover compensation, when illegally removed from public office, during period of removal; police and firemen of second class cities might apply for reinstatement within one year from the time of discharge; increasing the pay of prison officers and employes of State prisons; fixing the salaries of the members of the Board of Embalming Examiners and Secretary of the board, and providing for the licensing of undertakers; increasing the salaries of officers and employes of State reformatories; requiring physicians to state on a prescription whether it was for a child or adult, and providing that civil service employes must be given half holidays throughout the year.

ASKS SPECIAL COURT TO HELP 'NELLIE BLY'

Kings Prosecutor Says He Can Keep It Busy with a Mass of Forged Checks.

JUDGE SCORES RECEIVER

For Not Operating Ironclad Plant and Making Repairs as Ordered—Her Other Concern Prospering.

Such a remarkable showing of forged and raised checks and mutilated vouchers was made to Assistant District Attorney Elder of Kings County by Mrs. Elizabeth Cochrane Seaman yesterday that the Assistant District Attorney said he would postpone his vacation and spend the time collecting evidence against officials of the Ironclad Manufacturing Company, which Mrs. Seaman inherited from her millionaire husband twelve years ago.

The forged and raised checks and vouchers, which extend over a period of six years, gave a continuous story of how "Nellie Bly's" prosperous business was looted until it was driven into bankruptcy at a time when the factory was running at full capacity and had orders on hand to run for six months.

Among the papers was a note for $15,000 made out by the Ironclad Manufacturing Company to a saloon keeper a block from the Ironclad Company's plant in Brooklyn. On the back was an indorsement to the effect that $2,000 had been paid. Across its face, in large and nervously written letters, was the word "Canceled."

The cancellation was made by the saloon keeper less than a month ago. Two of Mrs. Seaman's employes are now under indictment for forgery and grand larceny, and are out on bonds of $5,000, which were lowered from the $30,000 at which they were first fixed, mentioned the saloon keeper in confessions made to Central Office detectives. The detectives, led by Detective Wilbur, visited the saloon keeper late at night and insisted on going through his safe. Among 207 checks of the Ironclad Manufacturing Company, on all of which the name of Mrs. Seaman appeared either as indorser or maker, the detectives found the note for $15,000. As soon as the saloon keeper saw it he asked the detectives to let him have it for a minute, and wrote the word "Canceled" across its face.

When next they came to look for him, after delving a little further into the complicated check transactions which passed through his hands, they found that he had sold his business and had sold stock in a bank which had cashed the forged checks and had departed for Europe.

Mrs. Seaman appeared before Judge Chatfield in the United States District Court, Brooklyn, yesterday to contest an application of Receiver Appleton L. Clark of the Ironclad Company to have the American Steel Barrel Company, across the street from it, included in the bankruptcy proceedings. She succeeded in having the matter postponed for a week, during which time Judge Chatfield will look over affidavits submitted by herself and the receiver.

At the same time a demand was made by Mrs. Seaman for an order compelling Receiver Clark to operate certain electric machines in the Ironclad Company's plant, from which she gets current for the American Steel Barrel Company's plant.

This demand angered Judge Chatfield, and he delivered a very pointed address to the receiver, calling his attention to the fact that he had already issued an order covering this matter, and that there was no excuse for its non-enforcement.

The receiver, through his attorneys, pleaded that the machinery had broken down. Mrs. Seaman insisted that with her own hands and the skill she had gained in ten years in the manufacturing business she could make repairs in ten minutes. She insisted that the trouble was that a coil had burned out and that she always kept a special coil ready for just such emergencies with pully attached even to hoist it into place.

When Lawyer Adolph Kiendl of counsel for the receiver interposed an explanation, Judge Chatfield said:

"Ever since these bankruptcy proceedings commenced the receiver has been sending his attorney here with briefs and papers covering matters already given attention in the court's instructions. I have no objection to the receiver's lawyer being made to do messenger service, but I do not think these things need constant attention from the court. The receiver should operate the plant as ordered by the court without more ado, and should make all repairs necessary to do it."

In the court proceedings fifteen lawyers were present, most of them coming from Wall Street banking houses who represent creditors. They all arose at once and gathered close to Judge Chatfield when a motion made by Lawyer Allen, representing Mrs. Seaman, asking that the secured creditors be restrained from selling bonds of the Ironclad Company until unsecured creditors have their day in court. Lawyer Leo Oppenheim, representing the unsecured creditors, argued in their favor, while Lawyer Whitridge of counsel for Brown Brothers & Co., bankers, the largest secured creditor, argued against it. Judge Chatfield called attention to the fact that the secured creditors forced Mrs. Seaman into bankruptcy, and that if they sold their collateral there would remain no need for the bankruptcy proceedings. He issued an order staying the sale of bonds for a week, and announced that he would hear arguments as to whether a permanent order against such sales should be ordered.

Lawyer Allen then submitted a motion to have Receiver Clark ousted on the grounds that he was making no moves to recover the vast amount of assets represented by forged checks, or to move against banks which had paid these checks, or to investigate others who had figured in the system by which the forgeries were successfully made and concealed in the company's books. He declared that the two indicted men, Charles W. Caccia and Stanley Glinik, upon gaining their freedom, had been admitted to the grounds by the receiver, while Mrs. Seaman and her representatives had been kept away. Judge Chatfield decided that as his associate, Judge Veeder, appointed Receiver Clark and would be serving next week, it would be better for him to decide whether or not the receiver was carrying out his instructions properly. For that reason he said he would suspend action upon the motion.

Two former salesmen of the Ironclad Manufacturing Company were on hand to show that they had orders for more than $100,000 worth of goods which they had to reject because of the sudden entrance of the receiver upon the property. L. F. Lawrence, factory manager, testified that he canceled 500 orders a day for three weeks after the forced closing of the plant, and T. J. McHale, sales manager of the dairy supply department, said that in his department alone the orders turned back amounted to $75,000.

Mrs. Seaman, who is conducting the American Steel Barrel Company without credit, on a strictly cash basis, had the largest balance on hand last night the concern has known in years. Its pay envelopes for to-day were all made ready under her direction last night, and she said that there was much less uncertainty about preparing them than ever there had been in the days when Caccia and Glinik had charge of her books and were giving her statements of balances as they saw fit.

WOMEN'S PARADE ON FOURTH

Suffragists Will Drive Around in Stage Coaches and Decorate Monuments.

A Fourth of July parade in stage coaches, with speeches, and a band in Continental uniform is being arranged by the Woman's Suffrage Party, with the decoration of monuments to patriots as the ultimate objects. The women say that the old patriots who worked for liberty and freedom would have been women suffragists in these later days, and therefore they will show them special honor. Everything will be done in old-time style.

The women speakers and decorators will drive through the city in two old-time stage coaches, each drawn by four horses, followed by a prairie schooner drawn by four more. The drivers will wear Continental uniforms.

The coaches, prairie schooner, and Continental band will start from the headquarters of the Woman Suffrage party in the Metropolitan Life Building at 11 o'clock. The line of march will be first uptown, but is not yet laid out in detail. The monuments to be decorated are those of Benjamin Franklin, Nathan Hale, Garibaldi, Peter Cooper, Alexander Hamilton, and Lafayette.

The vehicles will be drawn up before the parks where the monuments are, and the women first will make addresses before entering to crown the heroes. It has been said that the women will wear the women's dress of the time, but that has not yet been decided.

DEVOY FOOLS DEMOCRATS.

Brooklyn Court Clerk, Seeing His Job Going, Gets a New One at Same Pay.

Charles S. Devoy, Chief Clerk of the County Court, Brooklyn, and Republican leader of the Seventh Assembly District, got ahead of the "Ripper" bill now awaiting the Governor's signature, which would remove him, by resigning yesterday, and a few minutes afterward being sworn in as Deputy Clerk.

The new bill provides that the office of Chief Clerk shall be filled by the County Clerk, but the Democrats in framing the bill did not provide for the appointment of a Deputy Clerk. Mr. Devoy discovered the oversight and, without making known his intentions, to the Democrats anyway, he obtained his appointment as Deputy Clerk at a salary of $7,500 a year. The appointment was made by the Republican County Court Judges Dike and Fawcett on June 23. They also decided that the salary of $4,000 a year which Mr. Devoy's predecessor got was not enough for Mr. Devoy and raised it to $7,500, which is precisely the same sum that Mr. Devoy got as Chief Clerk of the County Court. Even if the Democrats appoint a new Chief Clerk he will not receive any more salary than Mr. Devoy. The place as Deputy Clerk to which Mr. Devoy was appointed was filled by John D. Acker, who died a short time ago.

Mr. Devoy's move shocked the Democrats. When they recovered from the blow they seemed to be amused, and even expressed admiration for Mr. Devoy's shrewdness.

The general impression prevails in Democratic circles that Thomas F. Wogan, the Democratic leader of the Ninth Assembly District, is slated for Mr. Devoy's former place as Chief Clerk.

Botanical Garden Lecture To-day.

The Summer lectures of the New York Botanical Garden, which are a feature of its work, will begin this afternoon, when Dr. N. L. Britton will talk of "Wild Flowers of Summer," in the lecture hall of the Museum Building of the Garden. The lectures are given on consecutive Saturday afternoons at 4 P. M. The building is reached from New York by the Harlem division of the New York Central, to the Botanical Garden Station; by trolley cars to Bedford Park or by the Third Avenue elevated to the Botanical Garden, Bronx Park. By the Lenox Avenue subway a change to the elevated is made at 149th Street.

More Lamps for Twenty-third Street.

Commissioner Thompson of the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity, has notified the Twenty-third Street Improvement Association that twenty-four additional street lamps will be installed in Twenty-third Street. The work is to be done at the same time that the street is torn up for the widening.

Queens Official Sent to Prison.

John Holmes, former Deputy Commissioner of Assessments and Arrears in Queens, who was indicted for appropriating funds of his office and pleaded guilty to petty larceny, was sentenced yesterday to five months' imprisonment in the Queens County Jail by Judge Humphrey in the Queens County Court, Long Island City.

SPEED OF THE PRESS CHECKED IN CUSTOMS

Collector Loeb's Orders Ignored and Coronation Pictures Held Up.

FAST BOATS MET MAURETANIA

But Wares Were Put Aboard the Slow Cutter, Which Waited Patiently to Take Allan Ryan Aboard.

The Cunard liner Mauretania did not reach her pier until yesterday morning. The vessel was delayed by high seas and much fog was encountered after passing the banks. The Cunard officials hoped to bring her into quarantine Thursday night, for she had on board the pictures of the Coronation, the first to reach this port since the event.

Collector Loeb had the revenue cutter Hudson take down thirty-five representatives of Canadian newspapers, motion picture enterprises, large pictorial syndicates, and American newspapers, all intent on getting the Coronation pictures off at the first possible moment.

The Mauretania arrived in Quarantine about 2 o'clock yesterday morning, and the cutter went alongside after she had been visited by the health officers. More than an hour was consumed by the appraisers in valuing the pictures and collecting the duty.

The order of Collector Loeb that pictures and films could be taken ashore as soon as passed and duty paid, was disregarded. Although many of the picture owners had high-power vessels waiting to rush their wares through, they were compelled to bring the pictures back on the revenue cutter. For some reason there was a further delay while the customs officials waited alongside for Allan Ryan, the son of Thomas F. Ryan, to dress, in order that they might bring him to the Battery. It was a little after 4 o'clock in the morning when this "special" cutter made fast to the Battery landing. The customs employes had been successful in bringing to naught the arrangements the Collector had made to accommodate the newspapers.

Young Mr. Ryan, with Dr. W. H. Rockwell, the elder Mr. Ryan's physician, went to France with his father three weeks ago on the Adriatic. Young Mr. Ryan told a story of how he had rescued one man from a poker game with professional gamblers. Mr. Ryan saw that the man was in the clutches of a swindler and stepping up to him said that he was wanted on deck. Outside Mr. Ryan was confronted by one of the gamblers, who demanded to know why he had taken the other away. Mr. Ryan replied that if the other man would appear before Capt. Turner he would be pleased to explain. The gambler subsided.

There was some heavy betting during the run of the Mauretania on her day's runs. On Monday last the pool amounted to $1,300. The day's run was 339 miles and the pool was divided between a Mr. Leadbeater and W. C. Ayer of this city. On Tuesday the amount in the pool was $1,100.

Court Sustains Balch Will.

Supreme Court Justice Bischoff sustained yesterday the probate by the Surrogate's Court of the will of Collins L. Balch, contested by his widow, on the ground of the undue influence of his daughter, Grace C. Balch. Mrs. Balch, who was recently released from Bloomingdale Asylum, gets an income of $2,500 a year under the will she has twice unsuccessfully attacked. Her daughter receives an income of about $12,500. Justice Bischoff holds that the Surrogate rightly adjudged that there was no evidence of undue influence.

$1,000 GIFT TO SUFFRAGE.

Women's Political Union Believes an Enemy's Conscience Compelled It.

A gift of $1,000 to the Woman's Political Union broke the blow of the failure to get the Legislature to pass the amendment to the Wagner-Levy bill which would have made it possible for women to watch at the polls. The Women's Political Union has been specially active in arranging for women watchers at the polls and its members believe that some enemy in the Legislature has seen the error of his ways and is making it known in this delicate way. The gift is anonymous, and will go toward the $100,000 fund which the women are raising to defray their working expenses. This contribution brings the cash on hand up to $10,000, with another $1,000 pledged to come in by November.

Miss Gibbie Gault

By Kate Langley Bosher

"Like MARY CARY, this book stands for the winning power of love," was said this week about Mrs. Bosher's new novel—a tribute indeed. "To read a book like this is like taking a sun bath," chuckles The Boston Herald. "This novel is of such pure gold quality that it recalls the best tales that Miss Alcott has left us to make the world better," is a Western opinion.

Mrs. Maxon Protests

The verdict is—and it was published less than five weeks ago—a really brilliant novel. The New York World found "the rapid movement which arouses and maintains living interest." The Herald declares it "full of shrewd but tolerant observation and of the crisp dialogue for which Anthony Hope is famous." A Southerner says "Its satire and humor are abundant."

How to prepare for camp, choose a site; how to cook and look out for yourself generally is one part of this big new book. Other chapters show the work of the organized camps. Boy Scouting is fully covered for American boys, with lessons in woodcraft. The book is edited by experts —George Bird Grinnell, editor of Forest and Stream; Dr. Eugene L. Swan, director Pine Island Camp; Garrett P. Serviss, the astronomer.

IT IS A FESTIVE EVENT to come across a book such as "The Prodigal Judge," written by Vaughan Kester.

This novel, which treats of American life of several decades ago, is wholly unlike anything else in recent fiction.

It glows with sturdy spirit and is so resolute and gladsome in its methods that at the very first page the reader is captured completely; and he is thereafter its most willing slave. —Philadelphia Record

AMONG THE AUTHORS

DAVID GRAYSON, it appears, is an Atlanta lawyer. He is the recipient of many letters, verbal congratulations and advice about "his books." To all of his admirers, however, Mr. Grayson politely smiles, assuring them that he is not "David Grayson" the author, and has not written "Adventures in Contentment."

ANTHONY HOPE is traveling with his wife, "somewhere on the Continent." He was not present at the Coronation and is said to have hidden himself away so completely, in his desire for a real holiday, that it is difficult even for letters to reach him.

JUSTUS MILES FORMAN sailed recently on the Cedric for England. He declares he intended to be "just too late for the Coronation, and I will go from England to Belgium, and I may find myself in Paris later on." It is said that he rarely fails to make an annual visit to the latter city.

RUTGER BLEECKER JEWETT, formerly manager of the American branch of John Lane Co., is now literary adviser and head of the editorial department of D. Appleton & Co.

GEORGE BRONSON HOWARD has completed the dramatization of his latest book, "An Enemy to Society," to be published in the early fall. Arrangements for the production of the play have been made, and it will probably be seen before the winter.

JOHN MITCHELL, the labor leader, is said to be writing a book on economic subjects. He will take the lecture platform early in July and tour the country, speaking on "The Philosophy, Purpose and Ideals of the Trade Union Movement," and "Industrial Accidents and Compensation to Workmen for Losses Caused by Them."

A. M. CHISHOLM, whose latest book, "The Boss of Wind River," will be published in the fall, lives at Windymere, British Columbia, many miles from civilization, in the primeval forests of the Northwest. Recently his publishers tried to communicate with him. Letters took so long that telegrams were used with the result that within the course of time a telegram reached the publishing house, concluding, "you shouldn't expect Park Row action on telegrams back to age before whiteman."

GEN. BASIL W. DUKE, of Louisville, Ky., whose reminiscences will be published in the fall, is a brother-in-law of Gen. Morgan, the Confederate raider. Duke was one of the youngest members of Morgan's band.

FRANKLIN P. ADAMS, a New York editor, will have a collection of his verse entitled "Tobogganing of Parnassus." Mr. Adams collaborated with O. Henry in writing a musical comedy at one time, the only instance in which the latter is known to have written anything in conjunction with another author. The piece was to have been called "Lo." O. Henry was asked why such a short and apparently meaningless title had been chosen. "Well," said O. Henry, "you see electric signs in front of theatres are so awfully expensive."

PARKER H. FILLMORE, the young Cincinnatian, whose latest book, "The Young Idea," has just been published, stopped over in New York a few days last week while on his way to Mrs. Edward Macdowell's colony in New Hampshire, where he plans to spend the summer, working on a new book. Mr. Fillmore recently returned from a year's wanderings in Europe. At one time he was government teacher in the Philippines, living in a province of Southern Luzon, in a little town where he was the only American. His official work was organizing schools and introducing English. He fought through two epidemics of cholera, and several lesser ills, such as dengue fever and smallpox. In literary work he has been most successful in stories of American child life.

WILL LEVINGTON COMFORT stopped for a visit in New York a few days ago on the way to his home in Detroit, where he is entirely occupied in literary work, writing magazine stories and two or three novelettes a year. Mr. Comfort served in the Spanish-American War, and afterwards went to the Philippines, where he commenced his career as a writer. From there he went to India and gathered the material for his first novel, "Routledge Rides Alone." He was a newspaper correspondent in China during the Boxer uprisings, and again in Japan and Manchuria during the Russo-Japanese War, an account of one of the principal battles in which is given in his novel. The latter, as a strong argument for peace and as showing the horrors of war, was sent to Tolstoy just as he left Yasnaia on his last journey. In Mr. Comfort's last novel, "She Buildeth Her House," he abandons the theme of war upon which he first made his reputation.

DR. HENRY SMITH WILLIAMS, whose latest book is "The Science of Happiness," is an advocate of early rising. He has made it almost a gospel in his book, and although he requires only about six hours sleep himself, he practices what he preaches and rises early. While writing "The Science of Happiness" he cut this period an hour or even two hours shorter for weeks at a stretch, not burning midnight oil, but retiring at a comparatively early hour and rising correspondingly early. As an example Dr. Williams cites the elder Pliny. "It appears that in summer he always began his studies as soon as it was night; in winter generally at one in the morning, but never later than two and often at midnight. No man ever spent less time in bed; insomuch that he would sometimes, without retiring from his books, take a short sleep and then pursue his studies."

JAMES BARNES, the author of "Naval Actions of the War of 1812," has in his possession an autograph letter written by Capt. Lawrence of the Chesapeake just before the disastrous fight with the Shannon. Part of the letter, addressed to "James, Cox, Esq., Merchant of New York," reads as follows: "Should I be so unfortunate as to be taken off, I leave my wife and children to your care, and feel confident that you will behave to them the same as if they were your own." The letter is of historic interest as showing that Lawrence, whose "Don't give up the ship!" will always be remembered as proof of his high spirit, went into the battle contrary to his best judgment. It also shows that he had had a serious difference with Bainbridge, which was, however, partly done away on the evening before the combat.

THE RED BOOK (Chicago) for July has a real New York detective story, one of a series, by John A. Moroso. The title is "Solid Ivory" and it describes the plain, everyday type of "plain-clothes man" familiar to newspaper workers in the metropolis. Through the stories, the late Inspector McCafferty figures as the guide and friend of James Tierney, the "bonehead" detective. The "Solid Ivory" story will be followed by "The Count Guy," "The Flight of the Stool Pigeon," "The Master Yegg" and perhaps others.

HERMAN BERNSTEIN, who recently returned from Europe, visited England, France, Germany and Russia, where he met Bernard Shaw, Hall Caine, Israel Zangwill, Max Nordau, Auguste Rodin, Prof. Hans Delbrueck, the noted German historian and former tutor of Kaiser Wilhelm, Maximilian Harden and Alfred Kerr, Germany's greatest dramatic critic; Count Sergius Witte, Minister of Finance, Kokovtsoff, Leonid Andreyev, Paul Miliukov, Prof. Maxime Kovalevsky and other prominent men. Mr. Bernstein is staying now at Uncasville, Conn. Upon his return from Europe Mr. Bernstein found a letter from Prof. George Woodberry, in which the eminent critic writes, among other things, as follows:

> I am glad to know that you are making a successful and useful literary career. For, as to the usefulness, I will say that I think there is nothing we need more in our literature than acquaintance with just such modern modes and thought and art as this work is an example of.

FLORENCE HULL WINTERBURN, whose last book, "Vacation Hints," is meeting with great praise, is engaged upon a literary work, "The Characters of Dickens," which will be brought out as a Christmas book by the Fifth Avenue Book Company this year. Her story, "Miss Dick," highly commended by the readers, is to appear also, about the same date, beautifully illustrated. Mrs. Winterburn intends passing the summer at the Delaware Water Gap.

TIME IN OLD TIMES

The third edition of F. J. Britten's "Old Clocks and Watches and Their Makers," just published, contains a good deal of matter that did not appear in the earlier editions. The fresh matter includes historical and descriptive accounts of a great many interesting old timekeepers and a large number of names of makers additional to those previously published. It also includes about a hundred new pictures, reproducing photographs of famous and beautiful clocks and watches, so that Mr. Britten's work now carries something over 800 illustrations. (Charles Scribner's Sons.)

THORPE SAYS: "In the middle classes morality consists in being the same as your neighbor until your neighbor is found out."

THORPE'S WAY

A Book of Spice and Shocks

By Morley Roberts

This is the story of Thorpe, whose radical views of marriage, religion, and morals suggest George Bernard Shaw; and of how he runs amuck through middle-class prejudices to the scandalization of his prospective family-in-law and the joy of his delightful Molly. "Gloomy Fanny" is in it, too—do get acquainted with "Gloomy Fanny."

It is good fun and good story-telling, too, for Thorpe is an ardent wooer, and the love story is bright with real romance.

UNQUESTIONABLY THE GREATEST BOOK IN YEARS

MY LIFE

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF

RICHARD WAGNER

Written by one of the most striking personalities of modern times; kept secret, for urgent reasons, during the twenty-eight years since the author's death; this great work is now published in Germany, England, the United States and many other countries.

THINK OF IT!

Wagner wrote this autobiography from memoranda that he had kept for thirty-five years; a king transcribed part of it at his dictation; some eminent literary critics who have seen the manuscript say that this is one of the most remarkable books of recent times, and will stand among the world's most famous autobiographies.

Between the years 1868 and 1878 Wagner compiled his memoirs from diaries and other memoranda which he had kept for thirty-five years, and then, out of consideration for his extremely free and frank discussion, not only of himself, but of prominent contemporaries, he took the utmost precautions to keep his work a secret. The book was set up by French compositors who did not understand German; twelve copies were printed, and the type was then distributed. Of these twelve copies, eight were entrusted to Frau Cosima Wagner and four copies were distributed among the author's nearest and dearest friends. The greatest care was exercised in the event of the death of any of these five people that the closely guarded memoirs should be turned over to one of the survivors. In this way the secret was kept so closely that although Wagner died twenty-eight years ago, very few even of the most assiduous students of Wagner's life have known his Autobiography was in existence. Its publication at last means the release to the artistic and music-loving public of the civilized world of a book of the most intense interest.

THE STEEL CORPORATION.

Mr. HERBERT KNOX SMITH, the Commissioner of Corporations, is a wizard with facts and figures. In his report on the steel industry, just made to the President, he presents the United States Steel Corporation in such a questionable and duplex guise that it is impossible to determine whether the great Steel "Trust" is a prince or a pauper, a tyrant or a vassal. The Commissioner convicts the Corporation of flagrant stock-watering, from which one might naturally conclude that it must be so poor in plants and property that nobody need be afraid of it. But then Mr. SMITH proceeds to present the Corporation as a veritable Colossus of immeasurable bulk and might, before which he seems to feel that this country ought to tremble.

Conviction on the stock-watering account is easy. Commissioner SMITH finds that when the Steel Corporation was organized in 1901, its tangible assets were worth only $682,000,000, against which it had the hardihood to issue $1,400,000,000 of securities. In defending this capitalization in 1902, the Corporation set down its iron ore properties as worth $700,000,000. The Commissioner of Corporations thinks $100,000,000 a liberal estimate. To strike off $600,000,000 from the company's estimate of its own assets is, of course, a short and easy way to make room for water, a deluge of water. Again, at the close of the year 1910, although Commissioner SMITH candidly credits the company with an addition of $505,000,000 to its investment account since 1901, he still finds an excess of capitalization over indicated investment of $281,051,222. As he says, the policy of the company in investing so large a part of its earnings in new properties "has eliminated a considerable amount of the water in the original capitalization of the company." But he still sees large volumes of water. The balance sheet of the Corporation on Dec. 31, 1910, as he points out, showed assets of $1,693,000,000, or $225,000,000 more than the outstanding capitalization. This is $500,000,000 more than Mr. SMITH allows. His theory is that the Corporation credits itself with an unreal appreciation in its natural resources, particularly iron ore, and, second, that it takes account of what he calls the "merger value attaching to its properties because of their combination and co-ordination under a single control." All such fictions he sternly excludes from the record.

This picture of the Steel Corporation as a concern that finds it necessary to swell its capital account in order to increase its seeming wealth is harmonious in color and treatment with his portrayal of the position of the Corporation in the steel industry. It has not quite maintained its position of dominance. "As against 60 per cent. of all crude and finished steel production in 1901, the Corporation now has not much over 50 per cent., indicating conclusively the continuous presence of strong and increasing independent production." While it overshadows any single rival, these figures indicate that its proportion of total production has "materially diminished in the ten years of its operation." That is what we should expect of a corporation that had injected into its accounts $600,000,000 worth of "water," in order to give itself fictitious magnitude. The juggling has been in the ore account. Mr. SMITH is at pains to show that iron ore in the ground is not worth much anyhow. From 1 cent to 15 cents a ton is a fair going price, although the Steel Corporation has agreed to pay for the Hill ores at a rate of 85 cents per ton, with an annual increase. It is by such reasoning or by such figuring that Mr. SMITH persuades himself that some $600,000,000 ought to be canceled from the assets account of the Corporation.

But when Mr. SMITH addresses himself to the task of portraying the Steel Corporation as a giant monopoly, an octopus of combination and a public danger, then, indeed, he allows weight and substance to ore holdings. In these great ore holdings Mr. SMITH is convinced that "there exists an earning power and a control of the industry":

> Thus the industry itself rests physically on the ore. The Corporation based one-half its capitalization on the ore; its profits on ore, as will be later shown, are large; and in the ore is its highest degree of concentration and control. The ore, therefore, is of primary significance in the Corporation's dominance, and in that resource chiefly are involved the industry's problems of ultimate public interest. * * *

Hence, not only on account of its great holdings of ore, but on account of these peculiar advantages enjoyed in the transportation of the ore, the Steel Corporation occupies an extremely commanding position in the iron and steel industries. Indeed, in so far as the Steel Corporation's position in the iron and steel industry is of monopolistic character, it is chiefly through its control of ore holdings and the transportation of ore.

It is as if Commissioner of Corporations SMITH, as the Government's head gamekeeper, had been sent out into the forest to inquire into the nature and habits of a certain dragon, as to which disquieting rumors were afloat. On the model of this Steel Corporation document his report would have read thus:

(a) Of this dragon no man need be afraid. Were he not stuffed out and padded in every part of his body, his rough skin would hang loose upon his old bones. His strength is in no wise proportioned to his apparent bulk. As to his long and armored tail, I have discovered that it is of papier maché. It would be detached by one good kick of the Federal boot. Besides, the animal is growing weaker.

(b) Nevertheless, owing to the enormous power which this scaly monster wields through the possession of such an immeasurable tail and because of his terrifying appearance and his irresistible strength, it would appear to be necessary for the public peace and safety to find some effective means of taming and controlling him.

WEEK-ENDS.

Mr. TAFT runs over to Beverly to-day for the first of the week-ends which will be all the vacation he can see his way to take while Congress is in session. Even this first one is to be shortened by a trip to Indiana, where the President will do a little more of the work with the public which is so resented by the Senators opposing the reciprocity legislation. All men of good will will hope that the makeshift of week-ends will not last long, and that before the August moon shines over the sea on the New England Coast he may be able to take a continuous rest there.

He has had a hard time of it for the past eight months, what with the upsetting elections, the regular session of Congress, the extraordinary session, and the wrestle with several big questions and a large number of small men. He has borne himself with cheerful patience and with no end of good nature, and he has had the reward of renewed popular trust and admiration. Copious draughts of salt air and a series of long nights of sleep with golf in between will hearten him mightily and prepare him for the hard work that still awaits him.

TWO STANDARDS, POLITICAL AND COMMERCIAL.

"Sen. G.'s" various bills afford an excellent opportunity to contrast fact and theory in the working of our institutions. Theoretically our legislators represent all that is best in our governing classes. As matter of fact the classes whom they govern spend most of their time in scurrying to cyclone cellars before these flowers of our democracy. Senator GRADY, speaking in his place, has said that he did not conceive the bill which bears his name compelling writers for the press to sign their articles, and there is precedent, therefore, for assuming that he did not conceive the bill against which members of the Clearing House met in protest yesterday. Consequently there is no authority for the hypothesis that the bill may have been inspired by any financial institutions whose standards are below those of the Clearing House, and who are envious of the label which they cannot wear. Neither is it permissible to state that the intent of the bill is to lower Clearing House standards, but the effect is that, however excellent the intent.

One of Senator GRADY'S bills authorizes financial institutions to keep reserves in bonds instead of in cash. Perhaps the intent of the bill was to improve the credit of that class of bonds, perhaps it was intended to aid those who had more of those bonds than they could easily dispose of otherwise. In either case the effect was to make bank reserves less liquid, and to that extent to impair the banking situation. His other bill forbids banking institutions to establish for themselves higher standards than are set by law. As such action is voluntary, and is to the obvious benefit of all customers of such institutions, and since there is no ostensible objector except the Senator, it follows that there is no ground for protest in the public interest. On the contrary, both of Senator GRADY'S bills are contrary to public interest, and exemplify the contrast between fact and theory in the working of our institutions as aforesaid. No longer is it possible to take for granted that breakers of the law are bad men, and there is presumption that legislators are not entitled to the honorary prefix to their names until they have distinguished themselves by the manner of their conduct in office.

It is idle to counsel those suffering by such legislation to mark it down for resentment at the polls. GRADY and those like him were not elected by the suffrages of members of the Clearing House, and have no fears of the votes either of bankers or of bank customers. The appropriate remedy to be "exhibited" is the application of public opinion in support of the standards of the Clearing House. They are a priceless possession of the commercial community, and ought to be preserved as carefully as even political rights. The institutions which have affiliated themselves with the Clearing House, and have complied with its standards, have done so at trouble and expense to qualify themselves to serve their customers better than the law requires. They are entitled to have recognized these services to every man who keeps a bank account. It is not proof of unsoundness that any institution is not a member of the Clearing House, but the admission of each additional member strengthens both it and every other member. Each non-member is entitled to be judged on its own conditions, but membership is proof both of conditions above legal standards and of assistance in meeting any temporary embarrassment, which is liable to come at times.

It ought to be possible to assume that such bills as these are not capable of enactment. Unfortunately one of these bills has been not only passed but signed. This does no credit to the Governor. He has had banking experience, and was expected to be a business Governor. It is certainly known that bankers of this city made representations to the Governor which were ineffective, since his signature reflected political rather than commercial considerations. It is possible, therefore, that the second bill may administer another dose of poison to credit at its source. In that case the Clearing House would be deposed from guardianship of the general financial situation, which it has safeguarded more than once. Advice may be wasted upon such a Legislature as this, but it cannot be possible that bank depositors should need to be cautioned to take their cue in this matter rather from the Clearing House than from Senator GRADY, even though he may in some marvelous manner secure the agreement with him of the Governor and the Legislature.

THE LEVY ELECTION BILL.

If the Governor was persuaded to send in a message that made possible the passage of the Levy Election bill by statements that the amendments removed all good grounds for opposition, he was grossly misled. If it was further represented to him that he might secure the passage of his favorite bills by helping in the passage of this, he was party to a bargain that he ought not to have made, and he will probably be cheated. In any case he will help the State, help his own party, and redeem himself from serious discredit, if he vetoes the bill when it reaches him.

It is barely possible that it will not reach him. There are still some Assembly amendments to consider in the Senate, and enough of the up-State Democrats in that body may see the true nature and effect of the bill to defeat it there. Senator BRACKETT was perhaps justified in his gleeful remark that the passage of the bill would be worth 100,000 votes to the Republican ticket next Fall, and that is a result which the up-State Democrats can hardly wish to bring about. The prime purpose of the bill is to repress independent voting. In the interior of the State, the independent voters are for the most part inclined to be Democrats or to combine with the Democrats of their own districts to defeat the machine Republicans. It is not to their interest to hamper such combinations. Neither is it to their interest that Tammany should have a more conspicuous and effective control of the politics of the State than it already has. The greater and plainer the influence of Tammany in the party, the harder it will always be to carry the State. Next to suppressing the independent vote, the object of the Levy bill is to strengthen and exalt Tammany. Every up-State Senator who votes for the bill votes to make the lot of his party in the State harder. Possibly this will dawn on the minds of enough of them to defeat the bill. If not, and the bill goes to the Governor, he ought to kill it. He ought to do so for the sake of public decency, and from true party loyalty and from self-respect. It is his one last chance this year to break with Mr. MURPHY, to throw off the yoke that Tammany seems to have placed on his neck, and to get back some of the confidence the people had in him when they elected him last Fall.

NO RABID "DOG DAYS."

The absurdity of requiring that dogs be muzzled or leashed during the four Summer months for fear of rabies, when they may run at large the other eight months of the year, during which they are quite as subject to the disease, arouses the protest of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. The ordinance, passed by the Board of Aldermen in deference to the myth about "dog days," commands this society to enforce its terms and to turn over the proceeds from fines collected to the City Treasury. But the city poundmaster is dead and there is no pound to which the captured dogs can be taken; the mandatory ordinance must, perforce, become a dead letter. Meanwhile, we would call the attention of the Aldermen to this statement, authorized by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals:

> The society does not take any stock in the old-time popular belief that dogs are peculiarly subject to rabies in the "dog days." In fact, it has been sending out a publication contradicting this theory.

If the Aldermen and the governing boards of most of the cities of the United States would possess themselves of copies of this pamphlet, some of the silliness that characterizes the Summer solstice would no longer be injected into the dog ordinances of the Nation.

STAGE-STRUCK GIRLS.

To be an avowed and influential patron of the arts carries with it some glory, but there are penalties, too, which it now seems may be transmitted to the third generation. A young tragedian, rising suddenly to proclaim anew the everlasting vitality of the art from which "Illusion's perfect triumphs come," to rejuvenate the drama after an epoch of seeming decadence, may well enlist the sympathies and arouse the enthusiasm of a grave jurist, develop in him something of latent histrionism, constitute him a patron and friend of worthy actors, and an arbiter of taste in the matter of iambic pentameters and disputed readings of SHAKESPEARE.

But if the outcome is to be a craze in his progeny for the theatre, its tinsel, its gossip, its affectations, and its cheap heroes, it would be better for the grave jurist to stick to his law reports, and let others, with no children and fewer social and domestic responsibilities, do public and private honor to the mighty actor whose genius may cause verse to become something better than airy thought and sculpture to lose its dumbness. The theatre is a noble institution, unquestionably, but its influence on its votaries is often cruel. To be bred in an atmosphere of theatrical chatter, to come in personal contact with all the histrionic lions, to be "first nighters" in the age of short frocks and pigtails is not the best training for little girls. We may reasonably infer, from the current news reports, that it spoils them for the sterner duties of womanhood.

The aesthetic influence of a good play is not to be disputed, but too much of any good thing destroys the human equilibrium. We must admit that the children of the stage are generally well-behaved, well-trained youngsters, who are as natural and childlike as they should be when they are at home. But the children of the stage-struck—heaven help them!—are often old before their time, overburdened with useless information, forward, vain, and vociferous. It is only when they reach the years that should be associated with discretion that their childishness asserts itself.

> The people are tired of legislation aiming to take from the people control of their own private affairs.—Mr. CONNERS of Buffalo.

Indeed they are, especially of such impudent legislation as the Stilwell City Hall Park bill.

> Gov. DIX has paid too much attention to the kind of legislation that interests nobody except the person who introduced it.—Mr. CONNERS of Buffalo.

But Mr. CONNERS should bear in mind that Gov. DIX feels that the "one person," Mr. C. F. MURPHY, is very deeply interested.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Investigation Along Wrong Lines.

There was something of unwisdom, and possibly of indiscretion, in the open manifestation of amusement by the lawyer who is acting so much like a Prosecuting Attorney in the quarantine "investigation" when Dr. BRANNAN said he was there as a representative of the truth. This statement was not funny, or at any rate the humor of it would have been apparent only to one who assumed that the object of Judge BULGER'S activities is to get, not the facts as to Dr. DOTY'S conduct as Health Officer, but colorable excuses for taking his place away from him and giving it to somebody else.

Judge BULGER, we feel sure, would not admit the accuracy of that theory, nor is he likely to thank anybody who forces the public to entertain it, even as a remote possibility. As an up-State man, he was pardonable for not knowing the special competency of Dr. BRANNAN to supply him with information about medical matters in general and quarantine matters in particular, but one has to go far to find a reason why, instead of giving Dr. BRANNAN an immediate opportunity to take the stand, Judge BULGER went on wasting his time in listening to absurd stories, some of them long since heard and refuted, and the others obviously of the kind that, to be refuted, needs only the analysis of a competent critic.

That the inquiry, as conducted, does supply material for laughter is, however, quite true. Think of listening with straight faces while a deck hand finds fault with and condemns as cruel and inefficient the methods followed by a sanitarian of Dr. DOTY'S experience and professional reputation in handling patients suffering from contagious diseases! Think of hearing with gravity, as an accusation against that same sanitarian, the statement that he ordered or allowed sick babies to be kept for hours out of doors on cold Winter days! The trouble with this "investigation" is that in it, so far, the solemnity and the levity have been misplaced, the one emotion being exhibited when the other was in order.

Of course we can hope that it will all be straightened out in the end, but meanwhile, quite needlessly, the unthinking part of the public is getting the impression that dreadful things have been going on down at Quarantine. Worse tales than the worst of these are told of the best hospitals by witnesses of the same quality as those who are testifying without cross-examination before Judge BULGER, but the tales do not get wide publicity before they have been subjected to expert examination. They do not, that is, unless it is the purpose of some newspaper or politician to make a scandal at any cost.

Witnesses Pressed Too Hard.

A suit the progress of which has been watched with probably more of interest than edification by the New York public came to its most exciting moment, this week, when a witness, who by inevitable inference shares the defendant's guilt or innocence, had vehemently declared that the charges brought against the two were false. After he had done this the opposing counsel asked him, in effect, if he would not have made the same replies if the charges had been true. His answer, again in effect, was that he would have done so, and though the lawyer on the other side tried to get him out of the unpleasant position of a witness who had admitted willingness in certain circumstances to commit perjury, the effort was not very successful. As a matter of fact, it could not be, and the best the friendly lawyer could do was to give the witness an opportunity to say that in this particular instance the truth could be told and had been.

The incident raises the question whether a witness can fairly be asked to tell what he would have done had conditions existed which he has sworn did not exist. To that question there seems to be but one answer, and why the court should not protect witnesses from impalement on one or the other horn of the dilemma is not obvious to lay minds. Indeed, those minds are always much troubled by the rule as to self-incrimination. Under that rule, a witness need not answer a question when he admits that a truthful reply to it would tend to incriminate or degrade him. But to utilize that excuse for silence is to make the answer which cannot be legally extorted, since an innocent man would rarely if ever have occasion to resort to it.

Judges may be able to ignore the implication of a refusal to answer, when thus explained, but it is probably an impossibility for jurymen to do so. As it is necessary, however, that confession of evil doing should be possible, why not ask the witness merely if he wants or is willing to confess this or that? If he says "Yes," let him go on; if he says "No," that would only continue the original uncertainty, for an innocent man would be as unwilling to confess a crime or misdemeanor as a guilty one, and thus the legal immunity from self-incrimination would be made a reality instead of the empty fiction it is now.

Live Now Only In Legend.

That a professional gambler can be really honest has been denied by competent authority, and the denial is supported by the mathematics of probabilities, which says that the inevitable result of taking a great number of fair—that is, even—chances is to "come out even." That is not "business," it is not making a livelihood.

But "gambler" is a word applied to more than one kind of men, and though the man so widely known as DAVE JOHNSON was called a gambler by everybody who knew him, and doubtless was one, none seems ever to have doubted that he had at least what passes in gambling circles for absolute honesty. In other words, he always paid his gambling debts, sooner or later, though they were often enormous and though he was under no legal compulsion to pay them.

This was enough to give JOHNSON a certain eminence in his "profession," and he added to the eminence by a certain picturesqueness that made him to no small degree the gambler of romance and tradition. Men of that type could never have been numerous, and JOHNSON was a belated survivor of the tribe. Even he had ceased to be contemporaneous long before his rather early death. The conditions that made him possible passed away before he did, and he will probably have no successors.

CATHEDRAL'S GRANITE.

Thinks Materials for Constructing St. John's Should Be Carefully Studied.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

If the Building Committee of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine contemplates a change in the style of architecture of that great structure, would it not be well to take this occasion for a careful study of the materials of construction employed? This is to be our most important ecclesiastical edifice and is intended, presumably, to last throughout the ages. It will be nothing short of a catastrophe if a structural material is used concerning the durability of which even a suspicion can be entertained. Color in stone is due to one of two causes, either the inclusion of mineral elements in their natural and normal state, or to the alteration of some of the mineral ingredients by external causes. An example of the latter is the change of color in any stone by weathering. Another example is what is known among quarrymen as "sap," a discoloration of stone along the bed seams and jointing planes. This is most frequently found in the granitic rocks and is due to the partial decay of the mica ingredients.

The stone chosen for the exterior walls of the cathedral is a granite of a pronounced yellow color quarried in New York State. It was commended solely by its color, as this is a unique tint among granites. It is to be noted that this particular tint is found only near the surface and it is possible to obtain enough stone of the same color solely by reason of the fact that the deposit has an immense superficial area. It should also be noted that the geological handbooks that describe this stone declare that the yellow color is due to the partial decay of the muscovite, or white mica. While granite is one of the strongest and most durable of all stones, there are certain varieties that decompose or become "kaolinized," owing to the decay of the feldspar and mica.

This matter is of such grave importance that it would seem advisable that the stone be subjected to severe scientific test and scrutiny before it is finally used for rearing the main walls of the cathedral. A change of material in any building during process of construction is unfortunate, but so far only the apse is near completion, and a different stone in the body of the edifice would not necessarily be inharmonious.

Mr. Ralph Adams Cram, who has been chosen as the consulting architect, also has a penchant for the warm yellow stones. Mr. Cram, however, usually gets his effect by the employment of what are known as the "seam-face" granites, quarried at various places in Massachusetts. These are thin bedded stones, lying in an almost vertical position and stained along the bed seams by percolating water. It is purely a surface coloration, and does not penetrate the rock appreciably or impair its strength. An objection to the use of the "seam-face" granites in such a building as the cathedral is that the stones are generally less than a foot in thickness and could not be used as a structural part of the building. They would have to be employed as a veneering.

Montclair, June 28, 1911. F. W. H.

Pure Democracy.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your issue of June 29, I think, I read a pronouncement on Democratic government, taking Greece as the example.

By the same line of argument monarchies, tyrannies, and federations would be placed under the same ban. All the old ones perished.

Nevertheless, for centuries, harking back to the old Greek republics, the Greek cities everywhere in Western Asia and Northern Africa enjoyed an amount of local self-government, truly democratic, that we have not yet attained. The old New England town meeting comes nearer it than any other form the modern world has seen. It persisted under Kings and Emperors for century after century. If the cities paid their taxes, furnished soldiers, and sustained the armies of the King when they were passing through their country they were left to do about as they pleased. No form of government will stand if the morals of a people are unsocial. Every rotten brick weakens a wall.

Not a Second Edition.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial article in to-day's paper, "Cruelty to Grady," is delightful, very delightful. Apropos, is this the same Grady President Grover Cleveland once called the "unspeakable Grady," or is it a second edition of the same breed?

THE PUBLIC AND SUBWAYS.

Says the Companies Should Have Begun Courteous Treatment Earlier.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There has been observable during the past few weeks a curious effort on the part of the companies desirous of obtaining the new subway extensions to enlist the influence of the traveling public on their behalf. This tardy recognition of the value of public opinion is most interesting, and may well be compared with the indifference which has heretofore existed as to the relation of the transportation companies to their passengers, both as regards comfort and convenience. It is not saying too much to state that the company which, by the enforcement of courteous treatment to its passengers, had established friendly relations during the past years of operation, might have had such an overwhelming popular backing as to have obtained all for which it asked. The existence of the contrary state of affairs, the absolute indifference with which the traveling public has regarded posters, circulars, and advertisements, is ample evidence of the extent to which the operating companies have lost what might have been to them a most valuable asset.

It is remarkable that men who are known otherwise to possess the highest business ability have perceived to such a limited extent the value of the co-operation and sympathy of the public to them in the conduct of their affairs. It is not overstating the question to affirm that if the Interborough Company, for example, had, during the years in which it has been operating the Subway, insisted upon the treatment of its passengers with ordinary courtesy by its employes, to say nothing of a prevention of the frequent insolence and occasional brutality, it would have found the result far different from that which has appeared.

There is no asset which is more valuable, or less costly, than a pleased customer; and in the case of the Interborough Company there is no asset which has been more deliberately thrown away. There is no peculiarity about this fact. It is well known that as soon as a man is endowed with a little brief authority and is provided with a uniform, or placed behind a grating, as in a railway station, a bank, or a Post Office, he loses almost entirely the courtesy with which he was formerly endowed, and seems to have had his nature changed from a gentleman into a boor; but it is surprising that his superiors do not perceive the valuable influence which is thus being deliberately thrown away. It is true that, as the late Col. Hain once remarked: "It is very difficult to induce perfect gentlemen to accept those positions," but it should not be difficult for the men who are in the management to insist upon the courteous treatment of their customers, as people to whom they may later be obliged to appeal.

It is probably too late to instruct these men as to the manner in which they have alienated those who would have been their best friends; if they have not learned their lesson now it is probable that they never will, but possibly those who come after them may learn that politeness and courtesy, which in themselves cost little, may be more valuable than anything which money can buy.

CITY IS SUBWAY MAD.

But Welcomes Signs of Returning Sanity Among Its Officials.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I want to thank you for the editorial comment in this morning's paper on the subway crisis.

As a taxpayer and one largely interested in the welfare and progress of our city, I would like to express my surprise that any such scheme could have obtained the unanimous consent of the Board of Estimate. It seems to me that we have gone mad on the subject of subway building, and I welcome any signs of returning sanity on the subject. Because we need a subway in the greatly congested districts of Manhattan Island it is assumed that we must have subways out on the farm lands of Long Island.

I would be perfectly willing to subscribe to the feasibility of the plan as proposed if it were only for work that was contemplated being done in the next one hundred years, but the proposition as it stands at the present time seems perfectly preposterous. Of course, we do need added facilities for our dense population, particularly on the east side of the city above Forty-second Street and on the west side below Forty-second Street, and the sooner the authorities arrive at a conclusion to build only those sections which are imperatively needed and let future requirements dictate as to further extensions the sooner we will stop talking and begin work.

We are in no shape financially to put through such a gigantic scheme as has been formulated by the Public Service Commission and indorsed by the Board of Estimate.

NIGHTFALL ON RIVERSIDE.

Spared by the City's all-embracing arm
A long and narrow stretch of country lies
Beside the river's bank, whose native charm,
Though sadly marred, still rests the wanderer's eyes.

Alas! Man's greed disfigures either shore,
And factory chimneys add a murky screen,
But twilight draws its kindly mantle o'er,
And lends a soft enchantment to the scene.

Then, as each sordid detail fades from view,
We see the river God Almighty planned,
And Nature finished, when the world was new,
Ere ever Hudson reached it with his band.

Soon darkness falls, and adds a glamour strange—
Our eyes, long since to childhood's vision blurred,
Regain their sight. We watch the landscape change
'Neath fancy's wand, by each fresh marvel stirred.

The Jersey shore is Fairyland by night
With gold and silver lamps hung near and far—
Hither and thither, in erratic flight
The Jack-o'-lantern bears his twinkling star.

The tugboats—river monsters—glow with gold,
Long lines of barges elfin islands seem,
And in night's magic mirror we behold
Their silvery lamps like dainty fireflies gleam.

Yon searchlight cleaves a passage to the sky,
A filmy pathway for the fairies' feet,
And overhead the placid moon swims high,
Lighting the bosky dells where lovers meet.

Stretched out at ease, on some secluded steep,
Lulled by soft airs, with fancies vague possessed,
We sink reluctant in the arms of sleep,
Who folds us close, as babe on mother's breast.

NO CLEAN DISHES FOR THE IMMIGRANTS

So Witness Testifies at Quarantine Hearing and Produces Rusty Cups as Evidence.

CRIME IS ALSO ALLEGED

Hoffman Island Attendant Declares Girl Was Deported After an Attack by Quarantine Employe.

Three rusty iron cups, which seemed not to have been washed for a long time, were introduced yesterday as evidence in the hearing which Special Commissioners Bulger and Cohen are holding at the County Court House into quarantine conditions at this port.

These cups, according to sworn statement of Benjamin Eagle, a laborer on Hoffman Island, belong to the detention station's kitchen and their rusty and unclean condition, Eagle swore, is a fair example of the condition of all the utensils the immigrants are obliged to use on Hoffman Island for their meals during the long periods they are detained there.

"There is only one cook and no extra kitchen help on the island," Eagle testified yesterday. "This one cook is supposed to do all the cooking, dish washing and serving. Of course, he can't do it for six or eight hundred people daily, and so gets immigrants to help him. The immigrants are paid with a paper of tobacco or a bit more bread. They are supposed to wash the cups, cutlery, and dishes. But they either do this carelessly or don't do it at all. They sometimes just leave the cups standing on the table and, without washing them, wait until they have dried and put them away for the next meal in an unwashed condition. I have known of a number of cases of immigrants refusing to eat or drink out of the table utensils at Hoffman Island because of their condition. I have known of instances in which coffee and tea have been made with salt water.

"Dr. Hudson, the Chief Medical officer of the detention station and the man in charge of it, heard of these complaints on the part of the immigrants, but never did anything about it. For a whole year and a half the lavatory in the dormitory above the kitchen was out of order and a stream of water used to leak down from it through the kitchen ceiling upon the head of the cook. Dr. Hudson knew of this and Carpenter Ludwig also knew of it, yet nothing was done about it.

"There are only 600 beds in the island's dormitories. So when about 1,200 immigrants were detained there several weeks ago 500 were crowded into the regular dormitories and 200 more were put in the room over the kitchen. The rest were huddled, men, women, and children, all together, into a room in the hospital where infectiously sick children had been lying. The sick children had been cleared out to make room for the new immigrants. The room wasn't fumigated after the sick children left it before the new immigrants were put there to sleep. The walls of all the dormitories at the detention station are very dirty, never having been painted or kalsomined except once in my knowledge, for five or six years. The rooms are never fumigated, so far as I know. The fumigation is supposed to be done by the engineer when ordered by Dr. Hudson. But even the blankets, after being used by one set of immigrants, are often not fumigated before being used by another set. I did about as much of this so-called fumigation work as any one else on the island. But I had too much work to do. To fumigate the blankets properly they are supposed to be placed, 500 at a time, in the steam chest for an hour, so as to be thoroughly saturated. As a matter of fact, we would frequently put them in the steam chest for only five minutes, and take them out before they had become hardly even wet. Sometimes we would put in part and leave out part. I don't believe, however, that Dr. Hudson knew about this careless fumigation.

"In order to save the trouble of opening up rooms, men, women, and children were sometimes obliged to sleep in the same room. At night no watchmen or employes are stationed in the dormitories, and in consequence of this there have been cases of objectionable conduct."

The witness declared that a young girl had been attacked by an employe on the island that afterward the girl was deported. He also said:

"There are special policemen on the island and they are armed with clubs, and an immigrant named Moses Habel was once beaten by them. The special officer who beat Habel is still in the employ of the station."

Commissioner Bulger cross-examined witness minutely, with a view to determining whether the unclean conditions were the result of actual lack of facilities or merely of carelessness on the part of Dr. Doty's subordinates in using facilities which were adequately provided. Eagle testified that the wall and floors of the buildings at the detention station in many cases really were water-tight and thus could be sluiced out with a hose, and thus kept much cleaner than, according to his statements, they are.

Eagle said he had reported to Dr. Hudson that the buildings were dirty and unsanitary, but that the latter, although he was in charge of the station, did nothing to improve conditions. Eagle said that Dr. Doty visited the island several times a week on superficial inspections, but that Drs. Hall and Reimer visited it daily.

"I never heard Dr. Doty express satisfaction or dissatisfaction with the conditions on the island," Eagle testified.

Both Commissioner Cohen and Charles Dushkind, lawyer for the complainants, told a TIMES reporter yesterday that they had visited Hoffman Island with Commissioner Bulger several weeks ago when about 1,000 immigrants were detained there.

"We saw the stream of water dripping down into the kitchen from the unrepaired lavatory above, and also the dirty cups and foul walls," Mr. Dushkind said. Dushkind is going to take the stand himself to describe what he saw.

Mr. Dushkind declared yesterday that many of the statements made by Dr. John W. Brannan, President of Bellevue and Allied Hospitals, were inaccurate, and calculated to hurt the Commissioners' investigation.

"Gov. Hughes did not investigate our charges against Dr. Doty, as Dr. Brannan is quoted as saying he did; neither were charges against Dr. Doty ever dismissed," said Mr. Dushkind yesterday. "What happened was that about a year ago we presented certain charges against Dr. Doty to Gov. Hughes. Dr. Doty filed an answer to these charges. But Gov. Hughes retired before the charges had been investigated. Much of the evidence we have presented at this investigation was not contained in our charges last year. So that when Dr. Brannan is quoted as saying that 'not an assertion has yet been made in the hearings which is not old and found by former Gov. Hughes to be false,' an impression is produced in the mind of the public which is unjust to us."

At the close of yesterday's hearing, Commissioner Bulger adjourned the investigation until next week.

We Don't Prevent Tuberculosis.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Referring to your editorial article, "The City's Unchecked Pest," it is undoubtedly true that tuberculosis is spreading faster than places are provided for the care of the victims. But it would seem that too much stress and effort are made to effect a cure and provide a haven for the afflicted and not enough attention given to the "ounce of prevention."

Why does not our Board of Health or those in authority fumigate and disinfect all public and semi-public buildings, city public buildings, theatres, churches, hotels, &c., and insist that the germ-laden dust and dirt be removed by vacuum and other processes? Let the same apply to our public thoroughfares.

In our urban districts, it is said on good authority, in the case of a person moving from one place to another the chances are one in seven of moving into quarters which have been occupied by a victim of tuberculosis, consequently infected, and the incoming tenant contracts the disease.

The germ of tuberculosis lives and is active an indefinite number of years, but may be easily destroyed by proper disinfecting.

POLICE NOT SHOCKED BY RUSSIAN DANCES

Watch the Performance at Winter Garden of Which Mayor Has Many Complaints.

HE URGES FORCIBLE ACTION

But Police Make No Arrests as Modified Performance Is Given—Managers Will Be In Court To-day.

Mayor Gaynor, in a letter to B. Ogden Chisolm of 66 Beaver Street, yesterday, stated that he had instructed the Police Commissioner to take physical possession of the stage of the Winter Garden and arrest "those engaged in the indecencies which it exhibits." The Mayor's letter was in reply to a communication from Mr. Chisolm, in which the latter called the Russian ballets "lewd and disgusting."

Last night there were plenty of police at the Winter Garden, but the ballets were not interfered with. Capt. Burfeind of the West Forty-seventh Street Station spent the greater part of the evening on the stage, witnessing the dances and pantomimes close at hand. He said that he had been instructed to watch the performance, and that he had had it under surveillance for a week. He declared that he could see nothing indecent in the show as it is now being given, and that, in his opinion, there was nothing in it that would tend to injure the morals of the community. Deputy Police Commissioner McKay was also present last night, but he had no comment to make.

The performance of the Cleopatra ballet last night, it may be noted, was somewhat different from that given on the opening night. Gertrude Hoffmann, in the title rôle, wore considerably more clothing, and the feature that was found offensive at first had been eliminated entirely.

The letter that brought forth Mayor Gaynor's comment follows:

Hon. William J. Gaynor, City Hall, New York.

My Dear Sir: I attended, a few nights ago, a performance at the Winter Garden, which purported to give an exhibition of Russian dancing, and I was surprised to find that a performance so lewd and disgusting, with very little to redeem it, should be allowed the privilege of public presentation in this city.

I had purchased tickets for Mrs. Chisolm to go with me, but she was detained out of town, and I went with a friend.

I hope that you have the power with you as Mayor to eliminate some of the disgusting features of this exhibition, which should not be allowed to continue in its present form. Yours truly,

B. OGDEN CHISOLM,

This is the text of the Mayor's reply:

OFFICE OF THE MAYOR.
June 30, 1911.

Dear Mr. Chisolm: I thank you for your letter. I have had numerous complaints about this play, and I have instructed the Police Commissioner to interfere, and, if necessary, to take physical possession of the stage during the play, and arrest those engaged in the indecencies which it exhibits. This can all be done under the law which gives the police and every citizen the right to arrest persons whom they see committing a criminal offense. There are certain people here who are doing what they can to degrade the stage in this city. I am sufficiently assured that the play is disgusting. Very truly yours,

W. J. GAYNOR, Mayor.

Mayor Gaynor has already written Commissioner Waldo several letters regarding the play, and at the West Side Court this afternoon Morris Gest, one of the managers of the Russian ballets, and Mr. Cass, the house manager, will answer summonses charging them with being parties to indecent stage exhibitions.

Sheffield was best man at her marriage to Thorne, to whom she was wedded when she was 18 years old.

Mrs. Sheffield is the daughter of Prof. Samuel Sanford, who was formerly head of the Yale School of Music. Her grandfather was Henry Sanford, founder and President of the Adams Express Company. SHOW HORSE IN A HOLE.

King Falls Into an Unprotected Hole in Broadway and Is Badly Cut.

A fine show horse was nearly killed in an excavation at Broadway and Fifty-third Street yesterday afternoon. The animal was King, by Silver Allen ex Star Ethan, owned by Marcus B. Newcomb, a horse dealer of 230 West Fifty-first Street.

Mr. Newcomb was driving in a runabout south on Broadway, and at Fifty-third Street the noise of the elevated trains frightened the horse. He reared, and made for the excavation. Newcomb said there was no railing around the hole, and before he could control his horse it plunged in.

An ambulance of the A. S. P. C. A. was called and its crew succeeded after an hour's effort in rescuing the horse, which was badly cut around the fore legs and chest.

King has been a noted winner in many horse shows, in roadster classes. He had four blue ribbons to his credit, and many minor prizes. He has appeared in tandem and paired with Silver King. King is valued by Mr. Newcomb at $2,500.

CHESTER DIVORCE IN SECRET.

Author and Wife Agree to Hearings Before a Referee.

George Randolph Chester, who wrote "Get Rich Quick Wallingford," and his wife, Elizabeth M., have agreed that their divorce suit shall be tried in secret. They made a joint application yesterday for the appointment of a referee to hear the testimony in the case and report his recommendations to the Supreme Court. Justice Erlanger granted the request, and appointed Herman Heydt.

The papers in the case were closely guarded and none of Mrs. Chester's allegations were divulged during the remarks in the courtroom. Pending the trial provision has been made for Mrs. Chester's support, an arrangement which does away with the necessity of any features of their disagreement becoming public through hearings on an application for temporary alimony.

MISS NETHERSOLE'S SEASON

She Leaves To-day for London, Marienbad, and the Pyrenees.

Olga Nethersole ended her season at Marquette, Mich., last Saturday night, and this morning she will sail for Europe on the Cleveland for a Summer vacation. She has been appearing in Maeterlinck's "Mary Magdala," and in "Sister Beatrice," the latter having been produced by her in San Francisco a week before Sarah Bernhadrt appeared there in the same play. "The Enigma," by Paul Hervieu, and "The Redemption of Evelyn Vaudray," by Henri Bernstein, were also in her repertoire.

Miss Nethersole will go first to her home in Norfolk Street, Park Lane, London, and then to Marienbad for the "cure," after which she will rest in the Pyrenees, until recalled to America.

HARRIS FAMILY FEUD.

Alimony Was Refused to the Wife Solely on Merits of Her Application.

The decision of Justice Bischoff on Thursday not to allow alimony to Mrs. Kathryn Brady Harris was not based upon inability of her husband, Sidney Harris, the lawyer, to pay alimony, nor was that pleaded by Mr. Harris in reply to his wife's application, the contrary being the case. Mr. Harris contended that his wife in her application had not established a prima facie case for alimony, and Justice Bischoff declined to appoint a referee to investigate the defendant's ability to pay on the ground that it is the duty of the plaintiff to furnish such evidence, which she had not done.

CHOPIN INTERPRETER HERE.

Vladimir de Pachmann Will Pass the Summer at a Watering Place.

Vladimir de Pachmann, regarded by some as the foremost player of Chopin's music, of which he makes a specialty, arrived yesterday in New York on the Mauretania for a concert tour, which will begin some time next Fall.

When de Pachmann was over here last, several years ago, he said he would never return, as his fear of an ocean trip is great. He was prevailed upon to change his mind only on condition that he should sail in the Summer, when the sea is likely to be calm. He will pass the hot season at some Summer resort.

Rehearsals will begin in London in September.

Mr. Cherry will go to England for a short rest, and the run of the play will be resumed in August. Mr. Frohman will bring it to New York again for an engagement at the Lyceum Theatre, where its run was cut short last Spring by the engagement of Mrs. Fiske.

COLUMBIA THEATRE ROW SHOWN IN SUIT

Revelations to Stockholders Sent E. P. Rush Abroad, Says Partner Gus Hill.

HE IS HELPING MRS. RUSH

Who Is Ordered by Court Not to Dispose of Property Husband Gave Her Before Sailing.

Supreme Court Justice Guy granted yesterday a permanent injunction to Edward P. Rush, the burlesque manager, restraining his wife, Maude, from disposing of realty at 614 West 188th Street and spending any part of $10,000 in cash, which are the subject of a suit brought by Rush against her.

Rush says he gave the property to his wife on Feb. 15, 1911, just before a trip abroad, "in view of the uncertainty of his return," and on condition that if he came back it should be returned to him. When he returned on April 26 last he says he found that the locks on the house had been changed, and that his wife refused to admit him. He married her, he says, when she was a chorus girl in his employ in 1902.

Mrs. Rush declared to the court that, although Rush made a will in her favor, his "preparations to support one Agnes Desmar," nullified the testament. She declares he was planning to live abroad permanently, and gave her the property unconditionally, repenting when he learned that she was about to sue him for divorce. She says he is worth $300,000.

Rush's name, she says, was Isidor Kalman when he married her; she doesn't know how he became Rush, and he sailed for Naples as John Davis. She heard that he had fled with Agnes Desmar. For Miss Desmar's convenience, she says, Rush restricted her, his wife, to the use of his motor car for occasional shopping trips and trips to church on Sunday. She says she believes he is now preparing to rejoin Miss Desmar in California or some other convenient place. To that end, she says, he has sold out most of his business interests.

Gus Hill, a theatrical manager, who is helping Mrs. Rush in her suit, put in an affidavit saying that he and Rush were interested in the Columbia Amusement Company, of which L. Lawrence Weber was Treasurer.

In 1910, Hill says, it was revealed at a meeting of stockholders that in the purchase of the property at 701 Seventh Avenue and the erection of the Columbia Theatre Rush and Weber got fees from contractors amounting to $65,000. This revelation, says Hill, frightened Rush, and he prepared his departure for Europe secretly, for two days after he had gone leaving his automobile stand in front of the Columbia Theatre to give the impression that he was still in town. Officials of the Columbia Amusement Company have steadfastly denied all the rumors of inward strife.

Rush, in his answer, declares he took the name of Rush twenty-five years ago when he entered the theatrical business, and that he is accustomed to travel incognito when he goes to Europe to procure dramatic specialties to escape the surveillance to which his skill at getting novelties subjects him at the hands of rivals. Rush blames business rivals for the alienation of his wife's affections.

SCOFFS AT HODGE STORY.

Prosecutor Thinks Woman's Confession Is a Scheme to Free Andrews.

Special to The New York Times.

WARREN, Penn., June 30.—Friends of John M. Andrews, Superintendent of the Warren Water Works plant, who was convicted of killing Emile Amann, and who is awaiting sentence, believe that the confession of Stella Hodge, known as Mrs. Arthur Drake, will free Andrews. He has filed an application for a new trial and hopes to be acquitted.

The prosecution declares that Mrs. Drake's confession is an eleventh hour attempt of the defense to escape justice, and the woman's assertion that she shot Amann by accident merely a flimsy excuse to give Andrews his liberty.

Amann was found dead beside his buggy last January. Investigation showed he had last been in the company of John M. Andrews, and the latter was held in connection with the killing. The bullet wounds and the position of Amann's body showed that he had not committed suicide.

Andrews protested his innocence, but was unable to establish a good alibi. Both men had been drinking on the night of the murder, and Andrews was not certain where he had been. Andrews was accused of irregularities in connection with his water plant books. Amann, who was an employe of the plant, was supposed to know something of the charges against Andrews.

The confession of the Drake woman to Detective H. C. Silcox at Atlantic City yesterday came as a surprise to all concerned. To-day Mrs. Drake was committed to jail after appearing before Justice Wheeler.

When asked to plead, the woman said: "I killed Emile Amann, but didn't do it intentionally. It was an accident."

In view of the statement there was no hearing, and she was taken to the County Jail to await the action of the September Grand Jury.

District Attorney F. J. Lyons and other officials engaged in the prosecution of Andrews place no reliance in the Drake woman's statements. They say that she gave them several stories, all sworn to, and for that reason they did not put her on the stand at Andrews's trial. The woman and James Scarlett, counsel for Andrews, charge Lyons with suppressing her evidence, and state that there is a conspiracy to send Andrews to the gallows.

The June Grand Jury has made a special report to Judge Hinckley making charges against a State Constable sent here to investigate the Amann murder, alleging that the officer, by direction of his superior, reported to the suspected man's attorney and gave him evidence instead of reporting to the District Attorney.

To-day a delegation of citizens called upon the County Commissioners and demanded that they retain detectives to ferret the mystery of Amann's murder and investigate the Drake woman's confession.

DANGEROUS FIREWORKS.

Fire Commissioner Advises Celebration Chairman What Not to Use.

Fire Commissioner Johnson sent a letter yesterday to Chairman Marks of the Fourth of July Celebration Committee, calling attention to the various kinds of fireworks which are dangerous and should be prohibited, at the same time explaining that no action by the Fire Department other than of an advisory nature had been considered necessary. This is the letter:

New York, June 30, 1911.

Mr. Samuel Marks, Chairman, Fourth of July Committee.

Sir: Confirming your letter of June 26 and the telephonic communications with Inspector David I. Kelly, having charge of the Bureau of Combustibles, I beg to inform you that in so much as the Board of Aldermen have granted permits for displays of fireworks on occasion of the Aldermanic celebration to contractors or persons who will indemnify the city, that no action by the Fire Department, except of an advisory character, seems called for.

However, I deem it my duty to notify you that aerial shells, maroons, rockets, aerial bombs and salutes are very dangerous and should not be permitted to be fired at any place in the City of New York; also that the following fireworks be prohibited:

Batteries larger than five-eighths of an inch in diameter and one inch long.

Firecrackers containing chlorate of potash or other high explosives.

Firecrackers containing picrate acid or picrates.

Colored fire containing sulphur or chlorate of potash.

Fireworks technically known as flying pigeons, whirlwinds, flying devils, wheat sheaves, gatling batteries, and the like.

I further recommend that no floral break shells or aerial shells of any kind be fired on any street in the city, and that those in charge be notified that it is dangerous to fire aerial break shells unless fired from a buried mortar, and that every precaution must be taken to keep mortars free from dirt and fire.

I further recommend that police lines should extend at least 100 feet from the place where the fireworks are set off.

Acting Chief of the Department Kenlon will arrange to have a fireman stationed at each place, as by the list furnished by you. Very truly yours,

JOSEPH JOHNSON,
Fire Commissioner.

It was stated at the Fire Department that already more than $5,000 worth of firecrackers, Roman candles, skyrockets, pinwheels, and other noise-making devices had been seized in the last two days, having been smuggled into shops. Only one store in the entire city, Commissioner Johnson says, has complied with the law regulating the sale of fireworks, but other shops have bought supplies in the hope of selling them without detection by the Fire Department Inspectors.

TICKET SPECULATORS JAILED.

Three Sent to Prison for Three Days —Next Will Go for Five.

"Didn't you men read THE TIMES yesterday morning?" asked Magistrate Corrigan last night of three ticket speculators who were arraigned before him in Night Court. "It was stated there that I had said I would send the next ticket speculator brought before me to the workhouse. I am a man who keeps his word.

"You speculators have been a nuisance around this city for years. Now you have got to stop. I have been told under oath that you divide your profits with the box offices and I believe it. You are going to the workhouse for three days each. The next speculator before me will get five days, the next ten, then twenty, then thirty, and then six months."

The prisoners, who were arrested in front of the New York Theatre by Detectives Bonser and Foley, said they were Joseph Rosenthal, 835 Kelly Avenue, the Bronx; Morris Bragner, 526 West 110th Street, and Louis Wilson, 505 Lenox Avenue. They said they had not sold tickets in the street, but simply had directed those desirous of buying to a store where they could get them.

DENIES MRS. TUTTLE'S CLAIM.

Fred Rothschild Repudiates Agreement to Pay Her $100 a Month for Life.

Mrs. Frances Tuttle of 80 Van Cortlandt Terrace, Yonkers, has sued Fred Rothschild, one of the owners of the Waldorf-Astoria Cigar Company, for $7,550 because he failed to carry out an agreement to pay off the mortgage on her residence and to give her $100 a month for life.

R. L. Cherurg, Mr. Rothschild's attorney, said yesterday that the suit would be contested on the ground that the agreement is illegal because of the nature of the consideration.

Mr. Rothschild says he first met Mrs. Tuttle in 1891 in Chicago, where she was living with her father, mother, brother, sister, and son. He supported the entire family till January, 1908. In 1902 he bought the house in Yonkers, and the family moved there. The son, Lamar J. Tuttle, he sent to a school of osteopathy for two years, he says, and he is now in practice.

Mr. Rothschild was married in 1902. His first wife, who had remarried after a divorce and whose second husband had died, sued him on the ground that the divorce was illegal and that she was still his wife. She lost the suit.

To Prison for Burning Child's Hands.

May Delnotte, a negress, was sentenced to-day to two and a half years in State prison for burning the hands of Amy M. Corse, a 12-year-old white girl, on April 6 last. The woman said the girl had been stealing pennies, and that she put the child's hands on a stove to stop her pilfering.

ABRAHAM ABRAHAM IS LAID AT REST

Many Prominent Persons Attend the Funeral Services in the Temple Israel, Brooklyn.

GAYNOR LEADS PALLBEARERS

Token of Respect for the Merchant at the Large Retail Business Establishments.

Men prominent in all walks of business and professional life attended the funeral yesterday of Abraham Abraham, the merchant and philanthropist of Brooklyn, who died suddenly on Wednesday at his Summer home in the Thousand Islands. His remains were brought from his home, at 800 St. Mark's Avenue, to the Temple Israel, at Bedford and Lafayette Avenues, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Mr. Abraham was a charter member of the Temple and was present at its organization forty years ago. He was also its President for twenty years.

A large crowd was gathered in the neighborhood of the Temple when the body arrived there, and along Bedford Avenue on either side of the thoroughfare the sidewalks were lined with people watching the long funeral procession. The inside of the Temple was thronged with those who came to pay their last respects to the deceased. While the services were in progress in the edifice the big stores in the downtown section of Brooklyn had their shades drawn, and business was at a temporary standstill, out of respect for the dead merchant. The department store on Fulton Street, Brooklyn, in which Mr. Abraham was interested, and Macy's department house in Manhattan, which is run by Isidor and Nathan Straus, who were also Mr. Abraham's business associates, were closed for the day.

Foremost of the honorary pallbearers to enter the church were Mayor Gaynor, Controller Prendergast, Borough President Steers, and Congressman Calder. The other pallbearers who followed them were Jacob Schiff, Charles A. Schieren, Franklin W. Hooper, A. Augustus Healy, Julius D. Fairchild, Justices Almet F. Jenks and Samuel T. Maddox, Nathan S. Jonas, Adolph Lewisohn, Jacob Brenner, City Magistrates Otto Kempner and Moses J. Harris, Michael Furst, Edward Lauterbach, L. Firuski, Frank Bailey, Eugene Benjamin, William Berri, Frank Jones, Dr. George W. McNaughton, Henry Jones, John Thatcher, Frank Pentlarge, Andrew McLean, Dr. St. Clair McKelway, Col. Willis L. Ogden, Leo Kohns, Justice Rosenthal of Manhattan, Edward M. Grout, Oscar Straus, Isidor Straus, Nathan Straus, George W. Moss, Aaron Levi, Benjamin Conroy, Magistrate A. H. Geismar, Henry Hentz, former Attorney General Simon W. Rosendale of Albany, George V. Chauncey, and Henry Roth.

Rabbi Nathan Krass of the Temple, who was an intimate friend of Mr. Abraham, officiated at the funeral services and pronounced the eulogy. A musical programme was arranged for the services. It consisted of an opening prayer, chanted by Cantor Nathan G. Melzoff; an alto solo, "Dry Those Tears," by M. Potter; "Crossing the Bar," by Messrs. Watterhouse, Potter, H. Baron, and Dr. T. Martin; and a 'cello solo by P. de Nike. The organ was in charge of A. C. Weston.

The members of Mr. Abraham's family present were his widow, Mrs. Rose Abraham; Lawrence Abraham, his son; Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Blum, Mr. and Mrs. Simon F. Rothschild, and Mr. and Mrs. Percy Straus, daughters and sons-in-law of the deceased.

There were also present representatives of many civic organizations in Brooklyn, the Presidents of the various organizations of the Federations of Jewish Charities of Brooklyn, a delegation of nurses from the Jewish Hospital, employes of Abraham & Straus, thirty children from the Hebrew Orphan Asylum, and friends and public officials from every part of the State.

The pallbearers and large numbers of friends accompanied the body to the grave in the Salem Fields Cemetery, Cypress Hills.

DEATH OF FLOWER PAINTER.

Paul de Longpre's Life Ends Near Los Angeles After Long Illness.

Paul de Longpré, from boyhood a painter of flowers, died on Thursday evening at his home, which stood in one of the most luxuriant gardens of Hollywood, a small place just outside of Los Angeles, Cal. He had been ill for a long time, an operation for mastoiditis about a year ago being followed by a rheumatic affection.

Mr. de Longpré was born in Lyons, France, in 1855, and by the time he was 12 he was in Paris trying his hand at the painting of flowers on fans. He was only 19 when he was married to Josephine Estiévenard, and when he was 21 his first oil paintings were accepted by the Paris Salon.

The artist suffered severe losses in the failure of a Paris bank, and this turned him toward America in 1890. In 1896 he gave his first exhibition here, when he showed many floral pictures at the American Art Galleries on Twenty-third Street. Every year since then has seen some exhibition of his in some American city. In 1899 de Longpré went to California, where the acres of flowers about his home made it one of the conspicuous places near Los Angeles.

ARCHBISHOP O'CONNOR DEAD.

Strict Disciplinarian, He Refused to Recognize the Knights of Columbus.

TORONTO, June 30.—Archbishop Denis O'Connor died this morning at St. Basils Novitiate of Bright's disease. He was born near Toronto seventy years ago, and was successively priest, Bishop of London, Ontario, and Archbishop of Toronto.

Archbishop O'Connor was a rigid disciplinarian, and steadfastly refused to allow the Knights of Columbus to establish a council here. He recognized only two societies, the Church and the family.

Stocks Dull and Lower — Erie Issues Strong on Reports of Canadian Pacific Alliance.

HEAVY BORROWING ON CALL

An Incident of Preparations for the July Payments — Estimates Indicate Actual Cash Loss and Loan Increase.

Continued discussion of the possibility of a traffic alliance between the Canadian Pacific and the Erie Railroad offered the explanation of the most interesting of yesterday's movements on the Stock Exchange, where the Erie stocks and bonds showed notable strength in the face of a general decline elsewhere. The reports that an alliance had actually been established between these two systems apparently went beyond the facts in the case although it is thought likely in railroad circles that some such agreement as has been reported will be arrived at. This is very difficult, however, from the acquisition of stock control of the Erie by the Canadian Pacific of which there are no indications whatever. Certain recent Canadian purchases of Erie stocks may have helped to give color to the story of Canadian Pacific buying of Erie stocks, but seemingly without justification. During the day's trading in the Erie shares all three issues sold at new high prices for the year and the two convertible issues as well as the other Erie bonds traded in were strong.

Elsewhere in the list the record was one of fractional declines on a light volume of trading. Exceptions to this rule included some losses in excess of a point in inactive issues and a few gains for the most part among stocks with relatively narrow markets. Among the day's general influences the advance in grain prices, particularly in corn was the principal unfavorable feature. Regarding the crop situation as a whole the day brought considerable conflict of statement, this being notably true of the condition of cotton in Texas and Oklahoma. Some private estimates minimized the decline in crop condition in those States, while the Oklahoma State report showed condition figures indicating great impairment of that State's crops compared with a month ago. The actual facts with respect to the indictments which have been handed down against certain steel officials including the head of one of the Steel Corporation subsidiary companies were found to be of less scope than Thursday's rumors had indicated and these were scarcely a factor in the day's trading.

The feature of the day's money market was heavy, borrowing of call money during the afternoon to replace loans which had been called in by institutions and corporations in preparation for the payment of interest and dividends, which fall due to-day. The only effect upon rates of the heavy shifting of loans was a larger demand at 2¼ per cent. The markets got through the June 30 financing without going above this rate both in 1909 and 1908, but back of those years, as far as 1904, which was a year of extreme monetary ease, the last week in June saw much higher rates than those now current. Payments to the Sub Treasury on account of the Panama Canal bonds continued on a large scale as well as other payments to the Treasury and the indications were that the actual bank figures to-day would show a decrease in cash. So large, however, has been the inflow of cash from the interior that estimates current in banking circles suggested that to-day's average figures would show increases in cash as well as in loans and deposits. It is known that subscribers to Government bonds have been borrowing against their subscriptions and this fact taken in conjunction with the heavy lending by the banks on call to replace loans called by other lenders is expected to be reflected in the actual figures by a considerable loan increase. The money rates which prevailed yesterday are a sufficient indication of the ease with which the money market is meeting all of the demands made upon it.

Borrowing on Panama Subscriptions.

About $5,000,000 more was paid into the New York Sub-Treasury yesterday, on account of the subscriptions to the Panama Canal bonds, bringing the total payments so far made here on account of these bonds up to $15,000,000. This is more than one-third of the total amount to be paid in here. In borrowing money against these subscriptions those to whom bonds have been allotted, cannot deposit the bonds themselves as collateral, for these have not yet been delivered by the Government. The method which is being followed in making these loans is to deposit the Sub-Treasury receipts with the banks, together with an order on the Treasury Department for the bonds themselves, when these are ready for delivery. The Treasury will begin making deliveriels of the bonds today.

Corporation Tax Payments.

Corporations subject to the Federal corporation tax are now making heavy payments to the Treasury, as the law requires the payment of this tax not later than June 30, which is the end of the Government's fiscal year. Up to the beginning of June, only a small part of this year's tax had been paid in, but within the last few days heavy payments have been made. The latest daily Treasury statement, that for June 28, shows corporation tax receipts on that day amounting to $2,712,817, bringing the total payments up to $10,211,750 for the month, and $18,452,878 for the fiscal year. It is estimated that the total corporation tax amounts, this year, to about $30,000,000.

May Move to Protect Tobacco 4s.

Some holders of the 4 per cent. bonds of the American Tobacco Company, it is understood, are planning to organize with a view to safeguarding their interests in connection with the plan for the reorganization of that company, which is now being formulated, and which will have to be presented to the Federal Court for its approval. The purpose is to prevent the adoption of any plan which would not meet the views of these bondholders in respect to their rights under the indenture covering these bonds. Both the 6 per cent. and 4 per cent. bonds of the American Tobacco Company are held in fairly large blocks by a number of financial institutions as well as by many individual holders. A recent list of the holders of these bonds included the names of several New York City insurance and trust companies.

Heavy Call Loan Demand.

The final completion of arrangements for taking care of the July disbursement requirements made a heavy demand for call loans yesterday, and it was estimated by one of the banks which was itself a large participant, that the business done in the call money market aggregated about $40,000,000. The prevailing rate was 2½ per cent., and notwithstanding the unusually heavy demand yesterday for this class of money, the rate was not materially higher than has prevailed all week. The lowest call money rate this week was 2¼ per cent., and the bulk of the loans up to yesterday was made at 2⅝ per cent.

Slump in Bank Clearings.

The statistics of bank clearings at the principal money centres of the country show a remarkable falling off compared with the recent more favorable aspect of these statistics as compiled by Dun's Review. The total clearings are put at only $2,526,218,115, a loss of 6.9 per cent. as compared with the corresponding week last year, and of 7 per cent. in contrast with the same week in 1909. These declines compare with the gain reported last week of 13.2 per cent. over 1910, and a decrease of only 2.7 per cent. in the 1909 comparison. A large percentage of the reversal of form may be accounted for by the decreasing operations on the New York Stock Exchange. At this centre last week, for instance, there was a gain over 1910 of 17.1 per cent., while this week there is a loss of 9.5 per cent. as compared with the previous year. Last year at this time the market was comparatively active, the transactions for the period covered in the figures exceeding those of this week by about 2,700,000 shares. Outside of New York the figures show considerable irregularity. A number of the cities, notably Chicago, which last week reported gains, show a loss this week as compared with 1909.

City Bond Receipts Disappearing.

Stock Exchange traders in the temporary receipts for the recent issue of $50,000,000 New York City 4¼ per cent. bonds are beginning to find themselves in a dilemma. The receipts are a good delivery on the Exchange, but the bonds themselves, which are now being turned out by the printers at a rate of a thousand bonds or so a day, have not been listed because printed by a concern which is not approved by the Exchange authorities, and are therefore not a good delivery on the Exchange. This issue has been unusually active on the Exchange and has been the medium of considerable volume of speculation during the recent rise. Traders are beginning to take thought of the possible embarrassment which will result as the temporary receipts disappear. The figures of actual bonds issued are easily obtainable, and the whole issue will be out of the printer's hands by the end of August, but the proportion of receipts which will be held out until the interest on this paper ceases on Sept. 1 is the problem which the speculative traders on the Exchange have to reckon with.

THE EUROPEAN MARKETS.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

Dealings in Steel common on the Consolidated Exchange accounted for about one-quarter of the total business of the day. Erie common was notably active, and the upward movement in it stimulated odd lot dealings in the first and second preferred, the total for all classes of Erie shares exceeding Reading's total. The business in odd lots throughout the list handled by commission houses continued large.

Free of tax in States of New York and Pennsylvania

Dated March 15, 1911 Due July 1, 1941

Interest January and July

Denomination $1,000 and $500 Coupon Bonds May be registered

Authorized issue, $2,000,000 Bonds Outstanding, $650,000

The Central New York Gas & Electric Co. owns and controls a system of electric light, gas and steam heating properties located principally along the main line of the New York Central System at Geneva, Waterloo, Seneca Falls, Phelps, Newark, Lyons, Palmyra and Clyde, serving a population of about 41,000 in Central New York.

We recommend these bonds for the following reasons:

(1) First lien on property replacement value nearly twice bonds outstanding.

(2) Issued by authority of the New York State Public Service Commission, Second District, whose engineer has fixed a replacement value of $1,250,000 on the properties, exclusive of franchises or good will.

(3) Net earnings are equal to double interest on these bonds.

(4) Franchises are either unlimited as to time or extend from 10 to 64 years beyond the life of these bonds. The Public Service Commission of New York State does not permit operation of competing companies, so long as the existing corporation renders proper service to the communities.

(5) Mortgage, approved by the Public Service Commission, further bonds can be issued when net earnings for twelve months are twice interest on the bonds outstanding and those it is proposed to issue, and for additions, betterments or extensions for but 80 per cent. of the actual cost of same.

(6) Tax exempt in New York and Pennsylvania.

Our purchase of these bonds was based on the following reports:

ENGINEERING—J. G. White & Co., Inc., New York.
AUDITING—Messrs. Haskins & Sells, Chartered Accountants, New York.
LEGALITY—John G. Johnson, Esq., Philadelphia, and Darrell D. Sully, Esq., Rochester, as to titles.

The greater portion of this issue having been sold we offer the unsold balance subject to prior sale at 97 and interest yielding 5.20%.

STOCKS OUT OF TOWN

Dull Trading In Most of the Market Centres, with Narrow Price Movements.

SOME GAINS IN CHICAGO

Strength in That Market and Substantial Gains In Many Local Issues—Fractional Gains In Baltimore.

Almost uniform strength on the Chicago Stock Exchange was most noticeable in the elevated roads issues and in the traction shares. Chicago Railways series 1 certificates added 2½ points, while the series 2 certificates rose more than 3. Among the elevated shares, Northwestern added a fraction, Metropolitan common the same, Metropolitan preferred a point, while the preferred certificates sold higher than that, and South Side rose a full point. A 2 point rise in Illinois Brick was the most conspicuous change elsewhere, and Edison advanced almost as much.

In Philadelphia's session the chief characteristic of which was midsummer stagnation, prices held steadily notwithstanding that traders were pessimistic on news regarding the Steel Corporation. Steel opened at a decline of ⅝, and after two or three transactions recovered to a level with Thursday's closing. Subsequently it sagged off again, but the short interest did not seem to make much capital out of the investigations by the Department of Justice and the Bureau of Corporation.

Trading in the Boston market was quiet again and fluctuations hardly worthy of mention. American Telephone sold "ex" the two-dollar dividend and the Rights, and was in good demand at between 139 and 140. The general list closed quiet and without feature.

In Baltimore United Railways bonds issues were in fairly good demand and fractionally higher. Seaboard adjustment 5s also moved up a fraction.

Yesterday transactions in the various out-of-town Exchanges as reported to THE NEW YORK TIMES were as follows:

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Operators Secure Option and Lease on Important Broadway Corner—Investors Buy East Side Apartments —An Active Bronx and Suburban Market.

The feature of the realty market yesterday was the large number of new building operations contemplated as a result of recent deals. The Johnson syndicate, which, as reported on the preceding day, holds an option from the Thompson-Starrett Company on the large plot at the southwest corner of Madison Avenue and Forty-second Street has practically closed negotiations, but possession of the property will not be taken until the existing lease expires on May 1, 1912, when work will begin on the twenty-story, $2,000,000 structure. Associated with Frederick Johnson in the syndicate will be, it is stated, Anthony N. Brady, C. K. G. Billings, George F. Knapp, George F. Johnson, and George F. Johnson, Jr.

An important transaction on the upper west side involves the erection of high-class apartment. Klein & Jackson have leased from Edwin A. Cruikshank for a long term, with an option to buy, the plot on the southwest corner of Broadway and Eighty-ninth Street, 100.8 feet on Broadway by 80 feet, now covered with low buildings. As soon as the lease expires the corner will be improved with a twelve-story apartment house. The rental is about $15,000 a year. The brokers in the deal were the Cruikshank Company and William A. White & Sons. Plans were filed by the architects, G. & E. Blum, for a $325,000, twelve-story apartment at 118 to 122 West Eighty-sixth Street.

The Knapp estate announced that it was about to tear down the old three-story residence of the late David H. Knapp, which has stood for over half a century at 150 and 152 West 100th Street, and erect on the site a six-story elevator apartment house. The frontage is 41.9 feet and about 118 feet deep. It adjoins on the east the Home for Aged and Infirm Hebrews. The Knapp house is one of the few remaining old landmarks on the west side.

Another west side improvement is about to begin on the southeast corner of River Side Drive and 148th Street, a plot 100 by 95, by the Audubon Improvement Company, which bought the property in April. It will be a ten-story apartment house from plans by M. A. Roth and will cost $500,000.

In the Dyckman section a big building operation involving four, five-story apartments will soon be started on a plot 100 by 150 on the south side of Vermilyea Avenue, 100 feet west of Emerson Street, by the Vermilyea Construction Company. Plans have been prepared for the new houses by the architects, Greenberg & Leuchtag.

On the east side in the Park Avenue section, plans have been prepared by the architects, Schwartz & Gross for a twelve-story apartment house at 68 and 70 East Eighty-sixth Street to be erected by the Putnam Construction Company, which bought the property a short time ago. The plot is 84 by 85.2. The new house will cost about $300,000.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Straw Braids Are Held Dutiable at the Highest Customs Rates.

In overruling a protest filed by Veit, Son & Co., the Board of United States General Appraisers holds that merchandise invoiced as straw braids, not bleached, are manufactures of straw leaves, an dare not dutiable as claimed. The merchandise was returned by the Appraiser of the Port as manufactures of cotton or chip or straw, chip or straw being the component of chief value, the assessment being under Paragraph 449 of the present Tariff act.

The merchandise is claimed dutiable at the rate of 15 per cent. ad valorem, or 20 per cent. under the provision for braids, plaits, laces, and willow sheets composed wholly of straw, chip, or rattan, suitable for making or ornamenting hats. General Appraiser Howell, who writes the decision for the board, overrules the objections of the importers and affirms the classification of the Collector.

THIRD HEALER HELD IN BAIL FOR TRIAL

Julius Benjamin, Arrested Before, Not Recognized by Mrs. Eddy's Followers.

DETECTIVE SIGNED A PAPER

Saying She Wasn't Being Treated—Medical Society Objects to Linking Case with Cole's and Winslow's.

Julius Benjamin of 148 East Eighty-third Street, who says he is a Christian Science healer, but whose name does not appear as such in the Christian Science Journal, was arraigned before Magistrate Herrman in the Harlem Court yesterday afternoon, charged by the New York County Medical Society with practicing medicine without a license. According to Mrs. Frances Benzecry, the investigator for the County Medical Society, on whose affidavit Benjamin was arrested, he seems to have conducted a lucrative business in the spiritual healing of such concrete, if not material, ailments as stomachache and to have had a very large clientele of women patients.

Benjamin denied that he practiced medicine, but Magistrate Herrman held him for Special Sessions in $500 bail.

According to Almuth C. Vandiver, counsel for the County Medical Society, and his assistant, John G. Dyer, Benjamin was convicted in Special Sessions once before, on May 3, 1906, of practicing medicine without a license, and was fined $150. He figured also, they say, in a case in 1908, when several women of the east side declared that he had sold pills which were supposed to have some influence in determining the sex of unborn children.

Mrs. Benzecry alleges that she visited Benjamin's office at 148 East Eighty-third Street on May 19, and found about fifteen women sitting in the reception room. So busy was Benjamin that he told her, she says, that he couldn't treat her until June 4. She returned on that day, and before Benjamin gave her the treatment, she says, he handed her a piece of printed paper, about three inches by two inches, asking her to sign it. She says she did not remember the exact wording of the paper, but signed it with the name of "Carrie Rosenberg" and gave an address.

"You understand, I do not give any medicine. I only give Christian Science treatment. I heal through the Word of God," she says Benjamin then told her.

She told him she had stomach trouble; that her head ached; that she could not sleep, had no appetite, and was very nervous. Then, according to her affidavit:

> Defendant said to deponent, "indigestion," and wrote upon a card bearing the name, "Carrie Rosenberg" on the top, the following words, "Nervousness, can't sleep, indigestion, headaches." Defendant said: "God never made you to have disease. You are made after the image and likeness of God."

Then, according to Mrs. Benzecry, he read to her from Mrs. Eddy's "Science and Health," and thereafter, ordering her to read, gave her the "treatment."

The treatment she describes as follows:

> Defendant then sat in a chair and had deponent sit close to him on a stool. Defendant put his elbow on his desk and rested his face on his hand, placed his other hand in his pocket, partly closed his eyes, and remained in perfect silence for about fifteen to twenty minutes.

Benjamin gave her also, she says, a prayer to be read each day, and charged her to bring the prayer along with her each time. He also charged her $1, she says, on three occasions when she called. Likewise, she says, he gave her a paper headed: "Important Notice, by Julius Benjamin."

In this "Important Notice" he relates some nine or ten things that persons coming to him for help should bear in mind. Among others, the paper says:

> Persons coming to me that God should help them must be willing to become honest and pure, otherwise they cannot be healed; for dishonesty and impurity are like an impenetrable wall between ourselves and God.
>
> Persons who think I treat them for the sake of money should not come to me. Persons should find out before they come to me whether my main object is money, or whether I am principally desirous that the persons should be benefited.
>
> Persons coming to me that God should heal them and who take material remedies are fooling themselves.
>
> Persons when not feeling well should not hold me in their thoughts, but should mentally realize that their wholeness is in God, that God is good, is only mind.

On one of her visits, Mrs. Benzecry says, she told Benjamin she had a pain in her back and eyes. Her affidavit says:

> Defendant placed both his hands on deponent's cheeks and said, "You are a very bad girl," and then lightly slapped deponent's face, "You are very wicked, you must have impure thoughts to think that you had any disease. You never had any disease."
>
> Deponent answered—I know I have a pain.
>
> Defendant answered—You have not.

The mooted question does not appear, according to the affidavit, to have been decided then and there.

On another day, Mrs. Benzecry says, she told Benjamin she felt "very good," and asked him whether, in view of the fact that she was going to a funeral on the following day, he could not give her an absent treatment.

"No, but I will have you in my loftiest thoughts," she says he answered. "Now, you read 'Important Notice' three times a day."

Benjamin, a thin middle-aged man with close black beard and sunken, bloodless cheeks, was represented in court by Frank C. Wells of the office of Henry D. Estabrook of 52 William Street. His lawyer produced the small piece of paper which he said Mrs. Benzecry had signed at the time of her visit to Benjamin's office, expressly declaring that she was not going to get any medical treatment from Benjamin. On the basis of this, he asked that the case be dismissed.

"My client simply asked her to have confidence in herself, nothing more," he said.

Mr. Vandiver protested immediately.

"We think this man is a menace to the health and morals of the community," he said. "There were former cases against him, and we think we can show more."

Mr. Wells asked that the case be adjourned until the cases against Winslow and Cole, two other Christian Science practitioners now on bail, should be decided. Mr. Vandiver and Mr. Dyer, however, declared that this case had features different than either of the other two, and must be tried by itself.

According to Mr. Vandiver, the assertion at the office of the Publicity Committee of the Christian Scientist Church, that Benjamin's name does not appear as one of their practitioners in the Christian Science Journal, bears out his own previous argument in the Cole and Winslow cases, that if Christian Science healing were excused under the law as a mere carrying out of religious tenets of a church, all sorts of unscrupulous persons and quacks could take advantage of that clause to practice spiritual healing for material gain.

Benjamin's counsel announced, after Magistrate Herrman had held him for Special Session, that he would ask to have the case transferred to General Sessions for trial.

SEIZE $200,000 IN FURS.

Customs Men Raid Store of Weinschenker & Co. for Undervaluation.

A squad of customs officials, armed with search warrants issued by United States Commissioner Shields, descended upon the firm of Charles Weinschenker & Co., at 45 West Twenty-seventh Street, yesterday and took possession of between $150,000 and $200,000 worth of skins. The seizure was made on the ground that they were brought into this country in violation of the tariff law by means of false and fraudulent invoices, which constituted an undervaluation by which the Government lost thousands of dollars in duty. The firm is composed of Charles Weinschenker, the head of the New York house; Jacob, a brother and senior member of the firm, and Max Tamarkin. The members of the firm are now said to be in Europe, and the last two mentioned are said to be residents of Leipsic, Germany.

The case is said by the customs officials to be similar in the fur trade to what the Duveen case was in the art world, and the undervaluation has, it is said, been known to the department for some months. Chief Wilkie of the Secret Service has been at work on the case for some months. The furs seized come from Russia, Germany, and France.

How experts at the Appraiser's Stores, with their supposed knowledge of values, passed the furs at the value given in the invoices is also to be investigated. These values are said to have been so much less than the true values that had intelligent care been exercised the figures would have been increased on entry.

The raid was made by Howard E. Esterbrook, Christopher C. Coffey, a Customs Inspector detailed to special work; Inspector John M. Williams, and a number of customs police. The store was in charge of Sarsak Weinschenker, a nephew of Jacob Weinschenker. He protested, but the customs men showed a search warrant and went ahead with their work.

Apparently they knew exactly what part of the stock to seize. They declared such a large quantity that it was found impossible to remove all the skins to the Appraiser's warehouse, at Christopher and Washington Streets. The amount of space there is limited. Collector Loeb was asked by telephone for instructions, and at his order three customs watchmen were placed in charge of the property in the store. They were instructed not to interfere with the employes or the progress of business, but simply to see that no one interfered with the skins wanted by the Federal authorities because of undervaluation.

The furs seized include seal, fox, and mink, and some cheaper ones that have been through the dyeing process, it was said.

The customs officials will not disclose the information upon which the raid was made. They admit, however, having been at work for days on the case and acted on a hint which came from abroad. M. Percy Andrews, the head of the Collector's law division, remarked that the case resembled that of the Duveen Brothers, but would not admit the possibility of arrests.

The duty on dressed furs, such as those taken in the seizure, is 20 to 35 per cent.

BOAT EXPLODES, GIRL DROWNS

Miss Alexander and Three Others of Milwaukee Leap Into Lake.

Special to The New York Times.

MILWAUKEE, June 30.—Miss Pauline Alexander of Milwaukee, daughter of L. M. Alexander, one of the wealthiest men in Wisconsin, was drowned at Oconomowoc to-night following the explosion of a power boat which she and three others occupied. The latter were rescued by Malcolm Rogers, son of a Chicago man, who has a Summer home on the lake, and who was in his sailboat when the explosion occurred.

Miss Alexander, her mother, her brother John, and Miss Fanny Jones of Milwaukee, a house guest, in the speedy Alexander motor boat, were making for the lake shore across from the Alexander home to meet Mr. Alexander, who was coming on the evening train for his week-end visit to his family.

The boat was near its destination when there was a violent explosion, which covered John Alexander with burning oil, set the boat afire, and terrorfzed the occupants.

John Alexander with his clothing afire leaped into the lake. An instant later his sister and the other two women followed. Miss Alexander was considered a good swimmer, but was impeded by her clothing and was unable to keep afloat until aid reached her.

She was a student at Miss Dennett's School near New York and was nearly 19 years of age. She was a talented musician. Her father is President of the Merchants and Manufacturers Bank, and was formerly known as a paper manufacturer. He still retains big paper mill interests in the North. He was President of the General Paper Company, the Western Paper Trust, which was dissolved by the Government a few years ago.

Miss Jones is the eldest daughter of W. L. Jones of Milwaukee, President of the Milwaukee Mechanics Insurance Company.

CONVICT BRIDEGROOM GONE.

Miss Faskin Thought She Could Reform Van Waringa, but Failed.

Special to The New York Times.

CARTHAGE, Mo., June 30.—Harry Van Waringa, former convict, has deserted his bride, whom he married June 13, just after his release from the Missouri Penitentiary, where he was imprisonned for stealing a cornet. At the same time the costly cornet of Charles Lumars, leader of the Carthage Band, disappeared, and jewelry belonging to the bride.

Mrs. Van Waringa departed this morning for Kansas City to look for her husband. She was Miss Ethel Faskin, a stenographer in the office of the Secretary of State at Jefferson City. She was a weekly attendant at the prison services, where the convicts' orchestra, led by Van Waringa, played. Their mutual interest in music drew the two together.

Through the chaplain she sent Van Waringa a piece of music, and, with the chaplain's permission, he wrote her a formal note of thanks. More music and more notes followed, and finally the correspondence was allowed to go forward without being inspected. In a letter the prisoner proposed, and the stenographer accepted him.

Miss Faskin said here shortly before her marriage that her parents had consented to her marriage to Van Waringa, with the full knowledge that he had been a convict. He visited at the Faskin home here, coming direct from Jefferson City after his release. Miss Faskin said:

"There are just as good men in the penitentiary as out of it. Some of them are sent up for trivial things and are not really bad. Harry Van Waringa is one of that kind. I have known him a long time and am sure he is a good man. What little there is to reform about him I'm sure I can do."

CONFER ON GAMBIER DIVORCE

Supreme Court Justices Consider Right of Gambler to Jury Trial.

Supreme Court Justices Pendleton and Bichoff held a consultation yesterday on the issue raised by Edward V. Gambier in his suit for the annulment of his marriage as to whether the case should be tried before a jury, as desired by Mrs. Gambier's lawyer, ex-Judge Augustus Van Wyck. Justice Pendleton was informed by Justice Bischoff that no motion for a jury trial had been made at the time he sent both Mrs. Gambier's suit for separation and Gambier's suit for annulment to Justice Pendleton for trial. Congressman Martin W. Littleton, representing Gambier, asked that both actions be decided by Justice Pendleton on the testimony which was closed Thursday.

Justice Bischoff advised Justice Pendleton that he would deny a motion for a jury trial, as coming too late, if one should be made before him. Justice Pendleton decided, however, to send the annulment action back to the general calendar, where a motion for a jury trial may be made at any time between now and October.

Decision was reserved on the separation suit.

Leaps from Riverside Viaduct.

Crowds on the Riverside Viaduct about 6:30 o'clock last night saw a young man wander slowly up and down the walks for a while, then suddenly jump over the rail. He fell 250 or 300 feet, striking in Twelfth Avenue and dying instantly. In the man's pockets was a card marked "G. L. Perk Vanlith," and a tailor's tag with the name "G. R. Perk Vanlith." The initials of this name were in the man's hat.

POLICEMEN FINED; NO EXCUSES TAKEN

Fifteen Days' Pay Lost to Every Man Up on Charges of Being Off Post.

MORE TO FOLLOW TO-DAY

Penalty the Severest Ever Inflicted for the Offense—Dillon, Former Inspector, the Trial Judge.

There was a gathering of thirty-nine nervous policemen at Headquarters yesterday morning for trial on charges of failure to patrol properly. They were the first of the batch accused as a result of recent night inspection tours by Commissioner Waldo and Chief Inspector Schmittberger. It became known a week ago that the Commissioner and Schmittberger were making these tours and that they had discovered a large number of violations of the rules for patrolling posts.

When Commissioner Waldo took charge of the department, he told the members of the force that if the men showed a desire to do their duty there would not be the same strictness in regard to trivial violations of regulations as in the past. After his tours, it was said, he was angered by the failure of the force to appreciate what amounted to an honor system of patrolling, and that his feelings would be reflected in the severity of the fines inflicted on men found guilty of being off post.

But the most pessimistic among the police hadn't looked for such fines as were imposed yesterday by Commissioner Dillon, himself a policeman, who sat as Judge at the trials. Fifteen day's pay was the penalty for each man found guilty, and by the time the first half dozen had listened to their sentences there was a mighty uneasy lot of policemen in the trial room. Never before in the history of police trials had the offense of being off post met with such severe penalty.

Harry Ahrens, who has been on the force for fifteen years was the first to be tried. Inspector Schmittberger said he couldn't find him on one of the new stationary posts at Fifth Avenue and Thirty-eighth Street at 2:11 A. M. on June 24th last.

"Mr. Commissioner I certainly was on post at that time," was Ahren's answer.

"I don't believe you," said Commissioner Dillon. "You're fined fifteen days' pay."

John G. Burns of the Mercer Street Station had Fourteenth Street, between Fifth and Sixth Avnues, to patrol on June 20. Inspector Schmittberger said he and Patrolman Creamer of his office went through that street at 3:29 that morning and couldn't find Burns.

Lawyer J. E. Murphy, who acted as counsel for several policemen and who is an ex-Police Sergeant, asked Inspector Schmittberger if the hood of his automobile was up or down. The Inspector could not remember.

"You have some difficulty in seeing, I believe?" asked Murphy.

"I can see as well as you," replied Schmittberger.

"But you wear strong glasses?"

"I wear glasses, but I can see all right."

Burns declared that he saw the automobile with the Inspector and Creamer, and said, too, that the hood was up.

"Guilty," said Commissioner Dillon. "Fifteen days' pay."

James F. Murphy, who used to be one of the raiding squad of Inspector Schmittberger's staff, was not found on post at 5 A. M. on June 20, when he was supposed to be on Thirteenth Street, between Fourth and Sixth Avenues.

Murphy said there were six big auto trucks in the Inspector's way when he passed the post, and that he himself was trying basement doors when the auto went by.

"I was on duty that morning," he said to the Commissioner, "and I have always been on duty in my nine years' work in the department. I've never had a fine, and I hope there won't be any now."

"Guilty," said Commissioner Dillon. "Fifteen days' pay."

After several others had met the same fate, Lawyer Murphy turned to Inspector Schmittberger and said:

"Doesn't the fact that the men fined are from Inspector John Daly's district influence you to make charges against them?"

Schmittberger was about to reply when Dillon broke in and said:

"You need not answer any such question, Inspector."

Inspector Daly is under charges in connection with poor patroling in his district.

In all, fourteen men were fined yesterday, and the other cases were adjourned until this morning, when patrolmen and five Sergeants, who are charged with failing to report the absence of patrolmen from their posts, will be arraigned.

MAYOR AGAINST 3 PLATOONS.

Orders Waldo to Seek Flaws in Law to Test It in Court.

Replying to a letter from Police Commissioner Waldo, Mayor Gaynor scathingly denounced yesterday the Jackson three platoon police bill recently passed by the Legislature. The Mayor has not the power to veto the bill as it applies to cities of both the first and second class, but he admonished the Police Commissioner to keep his eyes open to see if he could not find some flaw which would enable him to contest the measure.

The Mayor said he is not sure that the bill is unconstitutional, as it lays down one system for some cities and another system for others. This is the Mayor's letter:

> Office of the Mayor,
> June 29, 1911.
>
> Sir: Your favor of June 27, advising me that under the three-platoon law recently passed by the Legislature, professedly by its title to affect all the cities of the State of the first and second classes, the traffic squad of this city will have to be disbanded and the traffic work done by the various precincts instead, is at hand.
>
> It is very much to be regretted that such legislation should be passed without the consent of this city, as the Constitution contemplates. We had already put our police force on the basis of the three-platoon system before this law was passed, except that in order to have a regular traffic squad we had to modify the system a little. This law makes it impossible to have a regular traffic squad, as it requires tours to be changed every thirty days.
>
> And when I look at the bill I find that in place of being a general bill for all of the cities, as is expressed in its title, it is no such thing. It lays down one system for some cities and another system for others. I call your attention to Section 2, which says that the tours of duty shall be changed at least once every month, except in cities where the three-platoon system already existed at the beginning of this year, in which case the tours need not be changed every month.
>
> I therefore cannot help believing that the bill is unconstitutional.
>
> The constitutional provision is that if a bill applies to any number of cities less than the whole number of a class, it must be accepted by the Mayor of each city before it becomes a law. It seems to me very clear that the meaning of the whole provision is that, in order to be a general law relating to all the cities of a class, it must apply the very same provision to each city.
>
> A law which provided a different rule for each city, instead of one and the same rule for all, certainly would not be a general law for cities within the meaning of this constitutional provision. And that is the trouble with this act. As I have pointed out, it does not establish the same rule for every city, but a different rule for different cities.
>
> It follows that it is a special city law, instead of a general city law, and therefore has to be accepted by the cities before it can become a law, whereas it has not been accepted by this city or any other city.
>
> Please have your eye out to see some way by which we can contest this mischievous legislation. The policemen here do not want it and nobody wants it. They have the three-platoon system already in the very way they want it, which is also the way best adapted to this large city. Yours very truly, W. J. GAYNOR, Mayor.
>
> RHINELANDER WALDO, Esq., Commissioner of Police.

Commissioner Waldo's letter to the Mayor pointed out that to comply with the new law means that the traffic squad, as now organized, will have to be disbanded and the traffic work done by the various precincts. This is his letter:

> June 27, 1911.
>
> Hon. William J. Gaynor, Mayor of the City of New York, City Hall, New York:
>
> Sir: I have the honor to invite your attention to the so-called Jackson bill recently signed by the Governor, which requires that a three-platoon system of duty for policemen be established in cities of the first and second class, with certain exceptions.
>
> A compliance with this law will require that the Traffic Squad as now organized be disbanded. The traffic work will have to be done by the various precincts. The men now doing traffic work are pleased with the tours of duty which they now perform. The change will mean that all men in the precincts where traffic is regulated must be instructed as traffic men, which will take considerable time.
>
> The bill as applied to the patrol force will cause no change from the system recently established.
>
> Very respectfully, R. WALDO, Police Commissioner.

Police Commissioner Waldo will comply with the new law, but in the meantime the Corporation Counsel is to examine it carefully to determine its constitutionality.

FOUR GANGSTERS SENTENCED

Brooklyn Horse Thief Gets 20 Years—Eight or More for "Biff" Ellison.

Judges of General Sessions and Justice Davis of the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court imposed yesterday heavy sentences on four notorious members of as many powerful gangs. George Stelzemuller, one of a gang of Brooklyn horsethieves, was sentenced by Judge Malone to twenty years in Sing Sing and adjudged an habitual criminal.

Judge Malone also sentenced Adolph Berg, better known as "Pickles," a member of a Harlem gang. Berg got nine years in Sing Sing after he had pleaded guilty to assault in the first degree.

Berg is the man who, on Oct. 11 last, saved himself from bullets fired at him by "Biff" Clark at 103d Street and Madison Avenue by dodging behind a boy, who was killed. It was charged that Berg had used the boy as a shield and was therefore guilty of murder, but the charge didn't hold. He was rearrested on Jan. 26 after he had walked into a saloon at 1,580 Madison Avenue and shot Charles Dress, the bartender, and for this crime he was sentenced yesterday.

Justice Davis sent James Ellison, better known as "Biff," a member of the Jack Cirocco gang, who was convicted of manslaughter in the first degree two weeks ago, to not less than eight or more than twenty years in Sing Sing. Ellison, with two other members of his gang, went into Paul Kelly's saloon in Great Jones Street on Nov. 23, 1905, and shot and killed John J. Harrington, a member of the Paul Kelly gang.

Judge O'Sullivan sentenced Nathan Kaplan, better known as "Kid Dropper," a member of the "Johnny Spanish" gang, to not less than seven or more than ten years in Sing Sing, after he had been found guilty of robbery in the first degree. Kaplan entered the boarding-house of Miss Alice Lewis at 107 West Thirty-eighth Street on the night of Jan. 26 with four other men, and held up all the people in the house and robbed them of over $200. He was found guilty of stealing the specific sum of $87 from Miss Lewis. Charles Neuman, one of Kaplan's companions, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to nine years a short time ago, and another member, Charles Wilson, is in the Tombs awaiting trial. "Johnny Spanish" is also in the Tombs charged with murder in the first degree and robbery in the first degree. He will be tried next week.

Judge Foster sentenced Giuseppe Bongione, who on April 3 last shot and killed William Klugman, a driver of a brewery wagon which had run over his child, to not less than six or more than twenty years in Sing Sing for manslaughter in the first degree. Bongione pleaded temporary insanity, brought on by seeing his little boy killed by the truck.

LEAPS FROM RAIL OF BRIDGE.

Lands on Lattice Work of Tracks and Falls, but His Coat Catches.

The footpaths of Williamsburg Bridge were crowded at 7 o'clock last night with men, women, and children seeking the cool air over the river, when a man suddenly climbed onto the railing, and before any of the excited crowd could stop him, threw himself over. Fifteen feet beneath the railing run the trolley tracks, a latticwork of steel beams forming the roadbed between the rails.

Onto these the man fell while on the foot paths men and women cried out in horror. His body slipped between two of the steel girders and it seemed that he must plunge to the water 130 feet below when a shout went up from some of the spectators. They saw that the man's coat had caught on a projection from one of the beams and that he was suspended, safe for a moment.

While policemen ran to get to the roadway from the footpaths, calling to others on the roadway of what had happened, a Ralph Avenue car in charge of Motorman John Bauer, beside whom was riding Inspector James Garvin, came along. They had seen the man jump and Bauer put on full speed till his car was close to where the man hung over the water. Then he stopped, and he and Garvin climbed out on the steel grill work, and picked their way till they stood over the man.

The motorman and inspector got their hands under his arms and freeing his coat started to raise the man to the tracks. His fall had partly stunned the would-be suicide, but as he felt rescue at hand he regained his senses and struggled hard to break loose apparently intent only on dropping into the river.

Policeman Driscoll by this time had reached the roadway and climbed through onto the trolley tracks. He, too, caught hold of the man, but the latter continued his struggles and fought so hard that Driscoll finally half stunned him with his club.

On the pathway above the rail was lined with excited spectators who cheered as they saw the rescuers finally drag the man from his perilous position. He was put on a car and hurried to the bridge police booth, whence he was transferred to the Bedford Avenue Station. There he said he was William Baist, a porter, and that he has been out of work for two months.
